LYNN MERCHANT SLAIN

POLICEMAN AND ROBBER SHOT TO DEATH

Mob Attempts to Lynch Captured Robbers, But Is Restrained by Police—Quick Pursuit and Deadly Battle Ends Tragedy That Began in Heart of City.

Three bandits shot and killed two prominent Lynn men in the heart of that city to-day, robbed them of nearly $5,000 which they carried and made a dash for liberty. The police within an hour had shot and killed one of the bandits, wounded severely and captured a second and taken the third after he had been slightly wounded.

The victims of the murderous attack were:

THOMAS LANDREGAN, the junior member of the shoe manufacturing firm of Welch & Landregan. Killed instantly.

JAMES H. CARROLL, a member of the Lynn police force, who had been prominent in the city's affairs. He was accompanying Mr. Landregan from the bank to his factory. He was shot down, six bullets piercing his body. Carried to the hospital, he died in a few minutes.

The dead and wounded highwaymen were:

UNIDENTIFIED BANDIT, believed to have been from New York. Thought at first to have committed suicide. The medical examiner said he had died from police bullets.

ABE ABSTEIN of No. 23 East Second street, New York. He fell under the bullets of the police and was thought to have been killed. Later the police said that he shammed death. He was placed under a heavy guard at the Lynn Hospital.

BILL KOVINSKI, who gave his address as Boston. He is twenty-five years old. Identified as the man who shot and killed Landregan. Locked up in the Lynn police station.

GETS $30,000 FOR A WEEK OF MARRIAGE

HIGH FALLS, N. Y., June 25.—Six days of married life netted De Witt Beach $30,000, or $5,000 a day. May 31 he married Mrs. Mary B. Krom, a Kingston widow, who died June 6. She had, before her marriage, made a will leaving $30,000 she inherited from her first husband to children by his first wife. Beach contested the will and won under the law which makes a will made by a spinster or widow invalidated by her marriage.

TAFT FAMILY ENJOYS OUTING

BEVERLY, June 25.—To-day was the finest in point of weather conditions which the members of the Taft family have enjoyed since they arrived here. Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen started out early for a stroll along the water front and inspected with delight the gardens on the neighboring estates.

Robert Taft hurried over to the tennis courts of the Montserrat Golf Club, where he spent the morning. Charlie Taft was also on the job, being the boss of two sailors detailed from the President's yacht Sylph to aid him in putting into commission his little catboat, the Bandit.

WIRELESS TOOK TWO DEATH MESSAGES

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mrs. Mary Heaton Vorse, widow of Albert White Vorse, an author, who was found unconscious in a hotel in Staten Island and died soon afterward, arrived here on the Prinzess Irene, in ill health, and left for Wellesley Hills, Mass. She said she had received a wireless telling her of her husband's death and a day later received another wireless notifying her that her mother, Mrs. Hiram Heaton of Amherst, Mass., had died.

BOY SECURES BEACH FUNDS BY FORGERY

The checks were on the Framingham National Bank, amounting as far as known to $64.50.

SEA RESCUE BRINGS REWARD

BANGOR, Me., June 25.—A solid gold watch, suitably inscribed, will be presented Captain T. A. Fickett of Hampden by the United States government in recognition of his bravery in saving the lives of the captain and crew of the sinking schooner Edgar C. Ross last January.

Captain Fickett sailed from Boston in January, his ship, the Erne, being bound from that port to Buenos Ayres. When four or five days out a terrific storm arose and in the midst of it Captain Fickett sighted the Edgar C. Ross in a sinking condition. By hard work he succeeded in getting off the Ross's crew of seven men.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF COURT HOUSE

Henry A. Silver was to-day appointed superintendent of the Suffolk County court house building to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Solomon D. Stebbins who formerly held the position. Mr. Silver has been a jury officer since 1893. He lives at No. 45 Palmer street, Roxbury. His position calls for a salary of $2,000 a year.

GIRLS LOCKED IN REFRIGERATOR CAR

NEW YORK, June 25.—Unconscious, yet locked in each other's arms, two little Italian girls, were found lying on the floor of a refrigerator car on the Lackawanna railroad at Secaucus, N. J. They had been shut in the car at Buffalo by malicious boys, and had made the journey in their dark prison without food or water. They wer taken to Y. M. C. A. headquarters at Hoboken, where stimulants were administered and both regained consciousness. They will recover.

MELROSE EX-CHIEF OF POLICE DEAD

Ex-Chief of Police Frank M. McLaughlin of Melrose died at his home, No. 56 Green street, in that city, after an illness of more than a year. He was born in South Boston, July 12, 1847, and served as chief of the Melrose department from 1883 until May 7 of last year.

He is survived by a wife and two sons, Ralph L. and Percy L.

Mob Tries to Lynch Bandit.

When Kovnski was taken to the station house an attempt was made to get him from the hands of the police. One man made a desperate rush through the crowd, and before he could b stopped he had landed a terrific punch on the jaw. If the police had not been prompt and forceful the angered crowd would have lynched the bandit.

The identification of Kovinski as the man who shot Landregan will insure a speedy trial and justice for him.

Police Inspector Morrissey of Boston, with a group picture of the Jamaica Plain and Forest Hills bandits, went to Lynn and had a look at the two prisoners and the dead man. He said that they grealy resembled men in he picture, but he was not able to make a positive identification.

The police succeeded in recovering all of the money but $7. Abstein had the most of it. About $400 was found in the bag that the fleeing bandits dropped.

It is the opinion of the police that the three bandits belong to the most desperate gang that has ever operated in this country, and that of late they have been making their headquarters in New York. With their machine automatic pistols they usually are able to keep their pursuers at bay or kill many of them before they are captured.

The police of Lynn received the most unstinted praise from the public to-day for their bravery in keeping right after the desperate gang until the last of them was caught.

Mrs. Landregan, the widow of the dead shoe manufacturer, was prostrated at the news of her husband's murder. The shock was so severe that she required th srvices of a physician. She was unconscious whn Dr. Donovan reached her home. The doctor remained with her most of the day.

VICTIMS EN ROUTE FROM THE BANK.

Landregan and Carroll carried between them a leather satchel which contained between $4,000 and $5,000. The highwaymen took the money. Within a little more than an hour from the time of the holdup one of the bandits was dead, two captured and all of the money recovered. The unknown dead bandit may have committed suicide. His body, however, contained a number of bullet wounds and he probably was killed in the general fusillade from the pursuing police.

Angry Mob Attacks Captive.

When Kovanski, who was shot in the right hand, was brought to the station house, the police had to fight to keep him from the hands of an immense infuriated mob. He was finally landed in a cell.

STRAUSNEIDER FREED ON LACK OF EVIDENCE

John Strausneider, alias "Big Jack," who was arrested in connection with the embezzlement of $160,000 funds of the National City Bank of Cambridge, was released by the Federal authorities to-day, who decided to drop the case for lack of specific evidence, according to leased wire dispatches to the AMERICAN this afternoon.

Strausneider was arrested while "Big Bill" Keliher was on trial for aiding George W. Coleman, a clerk at the bank, to misappropriate the funds. It was charged that Strausneider was the dealer at the faro game where Coleman says he lost most of his $300,000 of stolen money.

Big Bill Stays in Jail.

William J. (Big Bill) Keliher will probably stay in the Charles Street jail until the Federal courts pass upon his exceptions, taken at his trial for abetting Coleman in looting the Cambridge bank. Keliher's friends, it is said to-day, have come forward with securities for the $50,000 bail required by Judge Hale after "Big Bill's" conviction, but Keliher has learned that the Government is ready to rearrest him on new charges the minute he sets foot outside the jail door. Keliher, it is said, prefers to remain where he is to suffering new disappointment.

The new charges against Keliher are a mystery. It is rumored that they are contained in one of the secret indictments returned this week by the Federal Grand Jury. Deputy United States Marshal Charles Morse, who is authority for the statement that Keliher will be rearrested if he secures bail, hints at a big sensation in the case. He declares that the Government has something bigger to spring than the charges upon which Keliher was convicted.

French Goes Abroad.

United States District Attorney French sailed for Europe to-day, and it is suspected that Mr. French planned to hold Keliher in jail during his absence from the country. It is believed Mr. French had Keliher reindicted on new charges in this case so that he may be sure of holding him a prisoner in case the exceptions taken by Attorney Daniel H. Coakley at the trial are sustained.

The exceptions will be filed and heard early in July and if they are not sustained the question of sentencing Keliher will then immediately come up. Keliher's bond is ready and waiting for the examination of the judge of the United States Circuit Court.

HUNDREDS TO PARADE FOR TEMPERANCE

Everything is in readiness for a parade of the various temperance societies connected with St. Ann's Church, Somerville, to-morrow afternoon, and several hundred persons will be in line when the starting command is given at 2:30 o'clock. The Rev. Francis J. Butler, pastor of St. Ann's, the director of the Holy Family Temperance League of the diocese, will lead the parade. The boys' band from the Mission Church, the Knights of St. John the Baptist, children and adults of the league will participate. The route is from the church at the corner of Medford and Thurston streets along the former thoroughfare to Magoun square, thence through Broadway, Marshall and Medford streets to the church, where it will be reviewed by Father Butler and dismissed.

WARD OF THE CITY LEAVES $44,000

David Ellis, administrator of the estate of Dr. Sarah J. Williams, who left $44,000, despite the fact that she had lived for years on charity in Boston, has asked the Court for instructions concerning the disposition of he money. Bank Commissioner Chapin confirms he report that Mt. Holyoke College would try to prove its title to some of the estate. He adds: "We have been told that there was a will made in Springfield leaving money to the college, but that it has been either lost or destroyed."

SURPRISE IS PROMISED IN GLOVER CASE

Now that Mrs. Lillian M. Glover and six of her friends have been tried and acquitted on the charge of having secreted Hattie Le Blanc in the Glover home at Waltham after the murder of Clarence F. Glover, it is expected that the next step by the Government in the case will be the trial of the Le Blanc girl on a charge of murder. District Attorney Higgins says the trial will be in the Fall.

It is rumored to-day that more secret indictments have been found in the case and that more arrests are coming. Early today these reports were unconfirmed, but the case has had so many surprises that credence is given in some quarters to the reports. No hint is given of the person or persons against whom new charges may be brought.

The verdict of acquittal returned in the cases against Mrs. Glover and her six friends places the defendants beyond peril of a second trial on the same charge, no matter what future developments in the case may be. The verdict supports the opinion of District Attorney Higgins that Mrs. Glover and the other defendants had no knowledge that Hattie Le Blanc was hidden in the Glover house after the murder of Glover. Mr. Higgins declared that the only person who could tell whether or not her presence in the house was known to any one beside herself was Hattie Le Blanc. The court refused to order her to appear as a witness.

DEATH IN COLLAPSE OF BIG SAND BIN

NEW YORK, June 25.—A sand bin collapsed at the dock of the Phoenix Towing & Transportation Company at Mineola, and one man is dead, buried beneath thousands of tons of sand, and a number of others are at the Nashua Hospital, some dying and others seriously injured.

The bin cost $100,000 with its machinery. The pile of fallen timber reached almost a hundred feet high. Under the debris a locomotive and a train of flat cars were completely buried.

WIRELESS OUTFIT FOR MILITIA

Adjutant-General Brigham has purchased in New York at an expense of $8,000 a modern field wireless army telegraph outfit, for the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia Signal Corps, the only one owned by a State militia organization. The entire equipment can be transported in one army wagon. It takes but sixty-eight seconds to set it up and messages can be sent by it from twenty-five to thirty miles.

NORTHAMPTON HAS $100,000 FACTORY FIRE

NORTHAMPTON, June 25.—The factory buildings of the Williams Manufacturing Company, the largest basket-making concern in the world, were destroyed by fire early today. The damage is estimated at $100,000. The buildings and contents were insured for $80,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but it is believed to be the work of a firebug.

A general alarm called out the entire Northampton department. Shortly after 2:30 a. m. when the first alarm was pulled in, the towns of Florence and Bay State were telephoned to send their apparatus. Practically the entire population of the three towns turned out to fight the flames or view the spectacular sight.

The company employed one hundred hands, who are now thrown out of work.

Fred Simpson, night watchman, was in his office when he first noticed the blaze breaking through the roof of the main factory building, which is a frame structure. The basketry and veneer, which make up the sole articles of manufacture, burned fiercely, and within an hour the main building had been wrecked. The fire quickly communicated with the surrounding buildings. The last to burn was the storehouse, which was of brick. All the other buildings were wooden.

Thousands of feet of the finest timber on the outside of the factory were saved with the greatest difficulty. The fire companies experienced trouble in playing their streams of water on the fire, as the nearest water plugs were located across the Mill River from the factory. The lodging houses occupied by the employes and Clarke's coal yard were saved.

An investigation has been started to ascertain the cause of the fire.

NO SUNDAY BALL AT FORT BANKS

Sunday baseball games at Fort Banks, Winthrop, have been ordered stopped by the department commander at New York, pending an investigation of the reports of rowdyism and drunkenness which, it is alleged, attend the games. The game scheduled for to-morrow between the Fort Banks team and the Dedham Athletic Association was called off to-day following a letter from New York.

It was expected that fully 5,000 civilians would go down to Winthrop to witness the game scheduled for to-morrow. Colonel Robert H. Patterson, commander of the fortifications of Boston harbor, believes that Sunday baseball is a good thing for the men at the fort. He blames Rev. Mr. White, the Baptist minister, for all the agitation.

Bryan Sails Under an Assumed Name.

LONDON—William Jennings Bryan, following the mode he has adopted since his arrival here, slipped quietly away from London and under an assumed name journeyed to Bristol, where he got aboard the steamer Royal George of the New Canadian line and sailed for Montreal with Mrs. Bryan. The Nebraskan booked his passage Tuesday afternoon without disclosing his identity. In fact, the officials of the steamship company did not know who their distinguished patron was until just before Mr. Bryan left London. Then he asked that his name be omitted from the passenger list.

No Smoke for Her Majesty.

PARIS, June 25.—A somewhat embarrassing incident occurred at a reception given by M. Pichon, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mme. Pichon at the Foreign Office in honor of the King and Queen of Bulgaria.

Late at night after the sovereigns had partaken of refreshments the Queen expressed a wish to smoke a Russian cigarette. M. Pinchon escorted her to the smoking room but to his great dismay he found only empty boxes. A minute of awkward embarrassment followed. M. Pichon rapidly explored the room for cigarettes, but without result. The Queen, who was standing near him, understood and saved the situation by talking to a lady.

Suffrage Stone Thrower.

LONDON, June 25. Emily Davison, the militant suffragette, was fined $25 in Bow Street police court for breaking windows in the House of Lords by means of chalk, to which labels were attached addressed to Premier Asquith. The labels contained such expressions as "Indignant women won't take this insult," and "Women won't be trifled with." These messages referred to the refusal of the Government to give facilities for the passage by the House of Commons of Mr. Shackelton's bill for the enfranchisement of women under certain conditions—the conciliatory suffrage bill, as it is called.

Defends America's Side.

THE HAGUE, June 25.—Mr. George Turner, of American counsel, completed his argument on the Newfoundland fisheries dispute between the United States and Great Britain before the Arbitration Tribunal. Mr. Turner's speech occupied four days. He asserted that international writers were so overwhelmingly in favor of the general contentions of the United States that to fail to apply them in the present case would be to override recognized international law.

Seismograph Shocked.

LONDON, June 25.—J. J. Shaw of West Bromwich reports that the largest earthquake ever recorded by his seismograph began at 1:32 o'clock this afternoon. The preliminary tremors lasted six minutes. The seismograph was deranged by the magnitude of the shocks. Mr. Shaw estimates that the quake was 1,200 miles away, either in Italy, southern Spain or Iceland.

No Clemency for Lemoine.

PARIS, June 25.—The Court of Cassation rejected the appeal of Henri Lemoine, the self-styled diamond maker, who was sentenced to six years imprisonment and to pay $2,000 damages to Sir Julius Wernher, from whom he obtained a large sum of money on the ground that he had discovered a way of making diamonds by a chemical process.

CHARLTON LOVE-CRAZED WHEN HE KILLED WIFE, IS ATTORNEY'S CLAIM

NEW YORK, Jun 25.—A series of remarkable developments to-day in the Charlton case make it appear extremely likely that Porter Charlton, the confesed slayer of his bride, will escape punishment for his crime.

Formal notification that the United States Government will not permit the extradition of the youthful slayer has been served upon the Italian officials by Ambassador Leishman in Rome. The Italian authorities, it is reported, assured him that they would not press the point, but would furnish the United States with all the evidence necessary if it is decided to try Charlton here.

It is now regarded as extremely unlikely, however, that Charlton will ever be compelled to answer before a jury for his act. Alienists, who have examined him in his cell at Hoboken Police Headquarters declare that he is unquestionably insane.

A commission of insanity experts, including William Jerome Arlitz, the leading alienist of New Jersey, and Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, spent five hours with the young man in his cell. They subjected him to every test, physical and mental, that is known to the medical world. Charlton's replies to many questions, it was said, were irrational, and he flinched under the tests.

"He is unquestionably insane," Dr. Arlitz declared to a reporter after the examination. "There is not the slightest doubt that he is mentally unbalanced."

If it can be shown that he is mentally irresponsible, Charlton cannot, under the laws of the United States, be held to accountability for his crime. In this event, he will, in all probability, his attorneys believe, be sent to an asylum for the criminal insane. How long he remains there depends upon whether or not his mental condition improves. If, after a short period of confinement, he is found to be sane, according to the attorneys, he will be freed.

Attorney J. Floyd Clarke, who has been retained to guard the interests of the young American, to-day said:

"Porter Charlton was love crazed when he killed his wife. His passion for her transformed him into a paranoiac. His mind was in a haze when he slew her and threw her body into Lake Como, Italy.

"He remembers little of what happened during the time he was packing her body into the trunk and preparing to cast it into the lake. He still loves her devotedly. He is suffering from dementia adolescence caused by his passionate lover for her.

Love Made Him a Paranoiac.

"To sum up the whole matter," said Attorney Clarke to-day, "the situation is this. Here is a young man who devoted the earlier years of his life to study and thought. Finally he met a woman much older than he. He fell desperately in love with her and married her. The radical change effected in his mind was too much for it. His mental powers collapsed; he became a paranoiac."

At the same time there was a feeling that Charlton, in the end, would escape extradition through the efforts at work in Washington. If Charlton is allowed to escape being returned to Italy there will never be a chance to put him on trial for the slaying. This is why the Italian officials are so alert.

Judge Charlton has decided to fight extradition proceedings.

"We shall make application for an inquiry into Charlton's mental condition," said Lawyer Clarke to-day. "Charlton is a paranoiac."

At the request of ex-Senator Edwards, representing Charlton, Recorder McGovern continued the hearing until next Tuesday morning. The Italian Consul-General offered no objection to the continuance, and neither did the State of New Jersey. Charlton was not in court during the proceedings.

Captain Harrison Scott, brother of Mrs. Charlton and the man who caused Charlton's arrest, will insist that his sister's slayer be tried, and if necessary, he said to-day, he will engage lawyers who will fight to have Charlton returned to Italy.

"Charlton is no more insane than I am," said Capital Scott.

Ex-Judge Charlton arrived at Hoboken at the same time as did Captain Scott. The father looked pale and worn. He had slept scarcely any, he declared, and showed the effects of the terrible shock of his son's arrest and confession.

In marked contrast with his father's appearance was that of the boyish husband, who has confessed that he beat his wife over the head with a mallet, thrust her body into a trunk and threw the trunk into Lake Como, a crime that has shocked two continents.

Alienists Examine Charlton.

It became known to-day through the statement of Clarke that an alienist had already examined Charlton and had pronounced that he was suffering from paranoia.

Young Charlton refused to make any statement to-day, saying that his lawyer had advised silence. The prisoner had a refreshing sleep last night and was bright and cheerful, apparently as though he was about to go out for a stroll. He had retired soon after a dramatic and pathetic conference with his father and brother, Robert J. Charlton, who had hurried from Washington immediately on hearing of the arrest.

A doorman stationed at Charlton's cell all night to prevent the young man from committing suicide, as it was feared that he might do, declared he might as well have been miles away, as the prisoner hardly turned during the night. Charlton, he said, awoke at 7 o'clock when an attache went the rounds of the prison with coffee and rolls. The young man got up, yawned, stretched himself and went back to bed, refusing food.

When the broken father approached the prisoner to-day the greeting was far more cordial on the part of the parent. The younger Charlton appeared indifferent.

Lieutenant Guthell of the Hoboken police, who made the Bertillon measurements of Charlton, said, after he had completed the work, that he was firmly convinced the prisoner was insane.

"Judge Charlton and I had an insanity expert visit Charlton in his cell in Hoboken," said Attorney Clarke to-day at his home, No. 61 West Seventy-fourth street.

Examination by Expert.

"I shall not give out the name of this expert until I learn exactly what the Italian government intends doing in this matter. After the expert had examined the prisoner he stated that Charlton was undoubtedly a paranoiac and that he was also suffering with dementia praecox or dementia adolescence, evidently caused by his experience with Mrs. Charlton.

"Charlton seems very bright in many ways. He is a great deal like Lord Byron aesthetically. In other ways he appears very blunt and seems not to understand what is going on around him. When his father called on him Charlton held up his hand and would not talk to his parent. His younger brother was with us.

"When the alienist examined him about his crime he seemed not to remember it. I asked him about Mrs. Charlton's past life. He grew angry at once and started to strike me. He is very touchy about her character, and no doubt he still loves her devotedly.

"His mind seems still a haze as to what happened at the time of the murder and afterward, although he is bright in other ways. Letters written by Charlton before and after his marriage have an important bearing on his mental condition. These letters were written to his father and other members of his family. Those written before his marriage are fine examples of literature. They are brilliantly written and full of high-minded thought.

M'NARY TO ENTER LISTS AGAIN

Dispatches received to-day from Washington say that Ex-Congressman William S. McNary who is in that city conferring with Democratic leaders over the political situation, has announced to them his intention of being a candidate for re-election from the Tenth Congressional District. To do this Mr. McNary will have to first defeat Joseph F. O'Connell for the Democratic nomination next October. Congressman O'Connell, when told that Mr. McNary would be a candidate again this year, said that there had been a rumor to that effect for the past two months. Mr. O'Connell declared he would start a vigorous campaign for a renomination immediately after Congress adjourns.

INVITE C. L. U. HEAD TO RECEIVE TAFT

President Michael A. Murphy of the Boston Central Labor Union to-day received and accepted an invitation from the committee of 150 for the "Safe and Sane" observance of the Fourth of July, to serve on a reception committee which will greet President Taft while the President is on his visit to Boston. The invitation states that the committee will meet at 11 o'clock in the morning of July 4 at a special reviewing stand on the Charles Street mall of the Common.

So far as it recalled this is the first time organized labor has been given official recognition by a committee instructed to greet a President.

CHARGE TAINTED BEEF IN RED AND BLUE WAR

NEW YORK, June 25.—Lieutenant-Colonel Wilard C. Fiske of the Seventh Regiment, N. G. N. Y., and Colonel John H. Foote of the Fourteenth Regiment, have signed official reports condemning the conduct of the manoeuvres held in Massachusetts last Summer under the command of Major General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., the Times will say to-morrow. Colonel Fiske is quoted in his report as follows:

"The rations and their issue were far from satisfactory, and seemed to have been arranged without consideration for the nature of the service. There were but few issues of fresh meat and it was frozen so hard as to make it almost impossible to use it in the limited time at the disposal of the cooks.

"Canned corned beef was issued, and at least one-third of the cans were tainted. The men had breakfast at 4, 5 or 6 a. m., and the next meal could not be served until 2 or 3 p. m.

"No ambulance was furnished and the medical officers were without transportation for the sick or exhausted until the middle of the week, when a makeshift wagon was furnished."

To Colonel Foote is attributed statements that the men were greatly overtaxed and were not properly provided with water. "In one long march," he is quoted as saying, "at least 100 men were seen lying or straggling along the road, completely exhausted, many of them unable to again join their organizations."

Hair Comes from Heads of Low Class Chinese

Great Risk Unless Purified—How to Cleanse Hair and Create New Luxuriant Growth.

DOLLAR BOX FREE!

Special Limited Offer to Readers of the Boston American

Women should beware of false hair that is not purified. Cases of leprosy and other skin and blood diseases are reported. The first indications are itching of the scalp.

False hair comes mostly from China, Siam, India, Turkey and other Asiatic countries, where it is taken from the heads of poor women and, horrible to relate, from corpses. Think of wearing hair cut from a woman dead from disease! In the great demand now existing the agents of American and European importers cannot get supplies fast enough, in consequence of which there is great recklessness. Hair needs exceedingly careful antiseptic cleaning. If you wear false hair you should see to this immediately, even if you have had the switch, puff or other piece for a long time; the danger comes when there is even a slight scratching of skin or scalp. You have been lucky thus far; take no chances. You can cleanse and beautify this hair.

Free to Every Woman

And why wear false hair at all? Why not grow your own? A new and surprisingly efficacious method now exists. It comes direct from Europe, where it is in great favor. It is the result of modern scientific research in hair growth. New hair comes forth in many cases at the rate of half an inch monthly. In many instances it grows faster. It is known to frequently grow upon spots that were bald for years. You should prove your own case. And do it now! The Koskott Method is unlike any other! It is the true secret, the triumph!

WRITE FOR FREE $1.00 BOX

As an extraordinary special offer, the proprietors will send a dollar box out of the Koskott Treatment to prove its merits, absolutely free. MUST MARRY TO GET HER FORTUNE

MILWAUKEE, June 25.—That she gets $100,000 if she wins a husband and only the income from that amount if she remains a spinster, is the odd provision for Miss Alma Naumanna, formerly of Milwaukee, in the will of Mrs. Henrietta Friend, who died recently in Germany, having an estate worth $500,000. The young woman is a foster daughter of Mrs. Friend, whose axiom of life was that a woman's place is the management of a home.

CIGARETTE KILLED BABY WHO ATE IT

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—As a result of eating a cigarette butt his father left on a table, eleven months old Walter Willis is dead. The infant, left in a chair near the table, ate the cigarette and became deathly ill before the cause was ascertained. A stomach pump was used too late.

MRS. VER PLANCK, BOSTON BRIDE IN "DARE" MARRIAGE

Formerly Miss Frances Sherbourne of Boston.

BOSTON GIRL IS WED ON 'DARE'

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mrs. Philip Ver Planck was Miss Frances Sherbourne of Boston before she was married in Hoboken on Wednesday last as the result, it is said, of a "dare." After a dinner at Brighton Beach Miss Sherbourne decided to return to New York and Mr. Ver Planck went with her as escort. With the couple were the party of friends with whom they had been dining and at the station one of the latter exclaimed in jest: "Look at the bride and groom."

"We will just call that bluff," said Mr. Ver Planck from a car window.

"Dare you to!" called the crowd.

After the train started Mr. Ver Planck made a formal proposal of marriage, and after accepting him Miss Sherbourne finally consented to wed the next day. They went to Hoboken in an automobile and were united by a justice of the peace. They are spending their honeymoon at the Virginia cottage in Bensonhurst. They will go to Europe in August for a three months' tour. The bride is twenty-one and very attractive. Her husband is a scion of an old Knickerbocker family.

Odd Items

MAN GIRL'S DRESS ARBITER.

NEWARK, N. J., June 25.—A great relief prevades the mothers of school pupils here. The momentous question of the guimpeless dress had been decided, and the arbiter said it was all right for a child in the primary schools to wear a garment of that kind. Curiously enough, it was a man who decided the question—Dr. Addison B. Poland, superintendent of schools. The girls of the Lincoln School, in the Vailsburg district, appeared in dresses that were three, four, even six inches low in the neck. Miss Ann E. Sayre, the school principal, sent them home. "You must have a guimpe put in," she told each of them. Excited mothers went to see Miss Sayre. She stood firmly by her opinion. They delegated Mrs. Francis A. Saunier of Smith street to carry the dispute to Dr. Poland.

FALLS FROM TREE AT 68.

HOLLIS, L. I., June 25.—A heavily laden cherry tree in front of the Odd Fellows' Home has long been beckoning alluringly to the old Odd Fellows there and making them wish that their joints were younger and less stiff. John Phillips, one of the youngest of them, who has just passed his sixty-eighth year, decided that his were young and limber enough. He surprised himself by making good progress up the tree and clambering in a few moments to a branch fifteen feet above the ground. Just as he reached for a large bunch of cherries the branch broke, and the old man fell to the ground. He suffered a concussion of the spine and probably will die.

WOMAN BATHER IN COLD TEA.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A woman who gave her name as Mrs. Eleanor B. Sanford and her address simply as "New York" when she registered at the Hotel Gotham was taken in charge by friends, after a series of eccentric actions on her part had led the hotel management to believe that she was not wholly responsible. One of Mrs. Sanford's pet hobbies was to take a bath in cold tea. She also made a collection of hotel butter plates and kept her room filled with floral designs used solely for funeral purposes.

CLUB BUYS INCH OF LAND.

NEW YORK, June 25.—When the Rocky Mountain Club bought Nos. 114 to 118 West Forty-fifth streets as a site for a clubhouse from former Judge William N. Cohen it did not get title to a one-inch strip on one side of the plot. A mistake in the survey had left the strip in possession of the Leggett estate, which owned the property before Judge Cohen acquired it. Lawyers for the club now have bought the strip from the Leggett heirs. The value of the land has risen so much since the club bought it last Fall that the members are inclined to sell it and buy another site. Their profit will go far toward paying for the new house.

ONLY WOMEN ON THIS JURY.

HAHN'S PEAK, Col., June 25.—One of the first woman juries in a court of record in the United States was assembled in the County Court by Judge Morning to pass on the sanity of Elizabeth Hutchinson. Hahn's Peak was almost wiped out by a recent fire, and the court could not locate enough eligible men in the town to make up the necessary jury of six. The women were duly sworn, heard the evidence, and adjudged Miss Hutchinson insane.

WHO'S WHO IN BOSTON'S 400

There were gasps of astonishment in New York and Boston when Ward McAllister, many years ago calmly prunned the number of New York's socially elect down to 400. The new dictum on who's who is about to be issued by Rev. C. W. DeLyon Nichols of Bridgeport, Ct. At the very opening of his report he bluntly avers that "there are only ninety-nine fashionable persons in America, outside of New York and Newport.

Of "the ninety and nine" that Rev. Nichols says are safe within the fold of fashionable life Boston can only boast fifteen. Those who are awarded the blue ribbon in Boston are:

Miss Eleonora Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Lawrence, Miss Prescott Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Rensselaer Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis H. Hunnewell, Jr., Mrs. J. Deforest Danielson, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, nee Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. E. Rollins Morse.

To add to the sting administered, the author of the new book says that Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Charleston, Chicago and San Francisco are "socially provincial cities." Rev. Nichols is governor-general of the National Society of Scions of Colonial Cavaliers. But he does not include himself in his list.

'BIG TIM' SULLIVAN LAUDS KENMARE LAKES

I just went around Ireland in a jaunting car for 500 miles, through the Wicklow Mountains, Kerry and Killarney and the little lakes of Kenmare, which I think are just as beautiful as the Lakes of Killarney, although not as well advertised. There's a big improvement in Irish cottages in five years. Not two cottages in 100 now have thatched roofs. Instead they have fine roofs of slate. In the cities the conditions are almost as bad as they ever were. It was only in the big cities I saw real poverty.—Senator "Big Tim" Sullivan returning to New York from European tour.

STRANG MAKES AUTO OUT OF AIRSHIP

NEW YORK, June 25.—After an initial attempt at aviation, Louis Strang remains a chauffeur. For a week Strang has been preparing to fly at Mineola, L. I., in a new biplane. He wheeled out the machine, tuned up the engine, stepped into the seat and called to the attendants to let her go.

With the eight-cylinder engine coughing and spitting and the propeller fanning a gale, Strang started off at a terrific clip—around the ground.

His control of the steering gear was good, but he could not rise. Twice he circled the field at breakneck speed, and was rounding into a third turn when the overtaxed frame crumpled. The whirring propeller struck the earth and flew into splinters.

The defendant is the wife of Andrew C. Wheelock, ninety years old, a millionaire real estate dealer of Lowell. As the result of the filing of the action in the Middlesex County Court at East Cambridge, the fine home of the Wheelocks in Worcester square has been attached. Mrs. Wheelock is forty-three years old and Record is forty-seven.

BABY LONGS FOR MISSING FATHER

In a sympathetic letter, Mrs. Bessie Dobson of No. 73 Winter street, Exeter, N. H., has appealed to the AMERICAN to help find her husband, who left her with her two young daughters about a year ago, saying that he was going out to look for work. He has not been heard from since. With the letter she sends a photograph of the youngest child, Evelyn, hoping that the sight of the little girl's features may bring the father back to their home. The letter follows:

"Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I am sending you a picture of my baby, and should like to have you publish it and help me find my husband. I have two dear little girls, and I think if he could only see this picture he would come back to me. He left about a year ago to look for work, and I haven't heard from him since. I have been trying to find him, but all my efforts have proved in vain. Please try and help me find him."

THREE DEAD, TWO WOUNDED IN DARING HOLDUP

LYNN MANUFACTURER AND POLICEMAN SLAIN IN STREET ON WAY FROM BANK.

The startling holdup which proved so deadly created intense excitement throughout Lynn, and soon after news of it was heard a crowd that probably numbered 10,000 persons gathered about the Lynn police headquarters.

The highwaymen were all armed with the most deadly weapons that the members of the force of Lynn ever saw. The pistols were of German make, immense in size, of automatic action and each contained a magazine that held nine cartridges.

Bandits Divide the Spoils.

After the shooting the three bandits dashed up Oxford street to High street, bearing the bag that contained the money. They entered the grounds of the late John W. Hutchinson, and climbed to the park on High Rock, where they stopped long enough to divide the bills, throwing away the bag and the silver money it contained.

This act was witnessed by Elwell Kimball, a teacher of the Lynn High School, as he looked out of a window in his residence at No. 48 High Rock street. After the bandits continued on toward Grant street, Kimball left his house and recovered the money, turning it over to the police.

Postmaster Craig and William Hunt, a business man, placed their automobiles at the disposal of the officers and when the posse reached the High Rock district, Captain William Rowe, who was in charge of the detail, was informed that the trio had entered the stretch of woods on Ford street.

Meanwhile Reserve Officer William Crowley, who had entered the woods from his route was engaging in a pistol duel with one of the desperadoes. Crowley had caught sight of a fleeing figure in the bushes and called upon the man to halt. Instantly a report rang out, and a bullet whistled by the officer's head. Crowley then began to use his own weapon, but the bandit stood his ground, apparently uninjured, and fired again and again at the patrolman.

Fugitive Surrounded in Woods.

With the advance of the storming party, Crowley joined them, and the woods were surrounded. Captain Rowe gave orders not to shoot the men, but to try to capture them alive. Advancing before his brother officers, Patrolman Mower entered the wooded tract, and was surprised to come upon a man, who sat with his back against a tree handling a big automatic revolver, but making no effort to use it through sheer fright, as the officer saw him trembling when he approached.

"Drop that gun," shouted Mower, leveling his own weapon, and the fellow complied. The prisoner thus captured proved to be Kovanski, who was later identified as the bandit who had done the shooting.

The weapon taken from him was of German make, of the same nature as the automatic affairs used by the Woburn and Forest Hills bandits. It contained a chamber with a capacity of twenty-four bullets, and many of these remained in the gun, ready to be set off at the touch of a finger.

Kovanski, shaking like a leaf, and displaying a bullet wound on the index finger, was being led forth a prisoner, when a shout from Sergeant Murphy called attention to another section of the woods. Murphy, in his earch of the low bush brush, had stumbled over the dead form of another of the trio. The man lay upon his back with a gaping bullet wound in his right temple, and a revolver at his side.

Dropped by Policeman's Bullet.

The prevailing impression at first was that he had committed suicide, when he learned that he was surrounded, but Medical Examiner Pinkham, after an examination, expressed the opinion that a bullet from a policeman's revolver had killed him, as there were no powder marks visible about the wound. The examination also brought to light other wounds on the body of the dead man.

When Kovanski was brought to the police station $2,000 in bills was found tucked away inside his shirt, next to his skin.

When Bill Kovanski was brought to the police station in an auto, a dense crowd had gathered. People were on the roofs, in windows and at every point of vantage that offered. The police had great difficulty in making a path through the crowd.

As they were taking Kovanski from the auto, Joseph Lydon, brother-in-law of Landregan, broke through the crowd and struck Kovanski a terrible blow on the nose. The bandit was taken off his feet falling back against the officers. Lydon was thrust aside.

Kovanski was immediately questioned in the station. He spoke little English. To most of the questions he responded with an idiotic laugh. Once he asked a question.

"Where other two?" he asked.

"Dead," replied an officer.

"He! he! he!" laughed Kovansky.

Policeman Grady's Story.

Policeman John T. Grady told the following story of Abestein's capture:

"With Policeman John A. Thompson, I was sent in the police wagon to the scene of the first shooting. We removed Carroll to the hospital, and Landregan's body to the morgue.

"When we got back to the station we were ordered in the wagon to Ford street. At Washington and Boston streets a small boy pointed out a man who proved to be Abstein.

"Abstein drew his gun and began firing. One bullet plowed through the wagon, below the seat.

"I jumped to the ground and crouched, keeping my eye on Abstein and waiting for a chance to nail him. Our position was made worse by the fact that our horse ran away.

"Thompson was shooting at Abstein. I think he was the one who finally brought him down. The bandit suddenly keeled over. We ran up and seized him. He was shot through the right hand, inside the right thigh, and a bullet had grazed his forehead, glancing upward.

"He looked as if dead. We took him to the hospital. Later we learned that he was only shamming death."

In addition to the two forces of police in automobiles who went after the fugitives, Policemen Thompson and Grady set in the chase by impressing a two-horse wagon into service. They whipped up, following in the general direction the three fugitives had taken. They had reached the wooded section in the vicinity of Ford street when they were startled by a shot fired from the bushes. The bullet whizzed through the wagon, narrowly escaping hitting one of the policemen.

Bandit Taken to the Hospital.

Thompson and Grady trained their revolvers on the bushes, firing shot after shot, until they saw that the bandit had dropped and had ceased to return their fire. Then they ran forward, gathered the wounded man in their arms, placed him in their wagon and tok him to the Lynn Hospital. The woundid man there gave his name as Abe Abstein and said he was from New York. He is fatally injured, it is believed, and will die soon.

None of the bandits quit firing until he had emptied his weapon. The police found that each of the three men had provided himself with an immense amount of ammunition. Each man had enough cartridges to fire more than 100 shots.

Silver Money a Handicap.

The fugitives had by this time reached High Rock and finding that the silver in the bag they were carrying had become very heavy they threw it away, keeping only the bills that were in the satchel.

One of the witnesses to the robbery was John Connors, who was driving a coal team. He was within twenty-five feet of the spot where the two men were shot down and robbed.

"I jumped down from my cart," said Connors, "and started toward the men with my whip in hand. One of the highway men pointed his revolver at me and pulled the trigger. There was no shot, however. I suppose the revolver had been emptied by this time and that probably saved my life."

May Be Forest Hills Bandit.

Inspector Michael Morrissey of the Boston police reached Lynn shortly after the shooting, taking with him pictures of the bandits who figured in the shooting at Forest Hills last year. He went to Lynn to see if it was possible to identify any of the three highwaymen as the Forest Hills bandits.

William Cody, a prominent Knights of Pythias member, declared to-day that a New York detective who was in Lynn in connection with some degree work of the order, pointed out two strange men in the street in Lynn yesterday and declared:

"Do you see those two men over there? There are two of the most notorious crooks in New York. What do you suppose they are doing here?"

It is believed that the two men pointed out to Mr. Cody were two of the three highwaymen.

Immediately following the shooting the entire available police force of Lynn was concentrated in an endeavor to run down the murderers. They found two soft felt hats which had been dropped by the fugitives in their flight. The hats bore a New York trademark which corroborated the story that the bandits were from that city. Several brass bullets were picked up, and one or two chambers of automatic pistols that had apparently been dropped by the highwaymen.

Mr. Landregan and Policeman Carroll were on their way from the Lynn National Bank to the shoe factory of Welsh & Landregan with the money. It was for the weekly payroll. They had obtained the money from Cashier George E. Pillsbury of the bank, and it is believed that the two men saw them get it and dogged their steps.

The two men, carrying the money, had proceeded as far as the corner of Oxford and Willow streets, having covered about an eighth of a mile since leaving the bank, when the attack came. They were just across the street from the factory, not more than forty feet from the front door.

Suddenly there appeared in the street in front of them a man with a revolver which he began firing at once. This was accompanied by one or two others, but it is said that one man did all the shooting. The highwayman fired directly at the heads of Landregan and Carroll, and apparently was intent upon shooting them dead.

Both men fell to the street. The men grabbed the satchel containing the money and fled.

The fugitives ran up Oxford street. The commotion made by the shooting caused a great crowd to collect. Many of them took up the chase after the fleeing men. The fugitives ran after a time in different directions. That divided the chase.

The police were soon on the scene, and attention was given to the victims of the attack. It was found that Landregan had been killed instantly. He was forty-six years of age. He was married. He was the junior partner of the firm and one of the best known men in Lynn.

It was found that Carroll was still alive. He was hurried to the hospital. The doctors found that he had been very badly shot, and that he would probably die.

Carroll was once a captain on the force. He is a past exalted ruler of the Lynn Lodge of Elks. He was on the police board.

BANDIT IS DEFIED BY GIRL IN TRYING TO STEAL A HORSE

One of the incidents of the flight of the bandits was when one of the three men attempted to steal a riding horse, the property of Miss Bess Baker, a Lynn society girl, who lives at No. 500 Essex street, Lynn. The bandit frightened the groom, who was holding the horse, and waved his weapon in Miss Baker's face. She refused to let go the bridle of the horse.

Mis Baker is the daughter of Charles H. Baker, a wealthy shoe manufacturer and an official of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company. The girl takes a horseback ride each morning betwen 9 and 10 o'clock. She rides astride and the horse had a man's saddle.

This morning the horse was standing in front of her home. A man from Smith's stable was holding it. Suddenly one of the three bandits appeared and pointing his gun at the groom demanded the horse. The groom surrendered. Just at this point Miss Baker ran down the steps of her home. The bandit was trying to mount the horse. Miss Baker rushed to the animal's head and seized the bridle. The bandit waved his gun. "I'll shoot if you don't let go that bridle" he shouted.

"Well, shoot, but you won't get my horse," replied the plucky girl.

The bandit, realizing he was losing time, turned from the horse and continued his flight afoot.

NICKERSON PROPERTY AT DEDHAM SOLD

The well-known George A. Nickerson estate, situated on Common and Haven streets, Dedham, has been sold, the title passing from James A. Lowell to Arnold Scott, former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County. The place consists of seventeen and one-half acres of land, a large frame house, stable, two lodges, a greenhouse, etc., and is considered one of the show places of Norfolk County. It is assessed for a total of $49,500. The grounds are in an excellent state of cultivation and contain many valuable trees and shrubs. The rhododendrons alone are unsurpassed on any estate in this part of the country. Scott intends to make extensive improvements on the estate. The brokers in the transaction were Beverly Rantoul, Robert J. Clark and Hayes & Welsh.

The John P. Webber estate has sold to Lewine A. Nathanson the four three-story swell-front brick houses and 5,812 square feet of land at Nos. 35, 37, 39, 43 Bickford street, near Mindon street, Roxbury. This property is taxed for a total of $7,500, of which $2,300 is on the land.

SUEZ CANAL SHOWS HIGH PROFITS

LONDON, June 25.—The last fiscal year has been the most profitable in the history of the Suez Canal. The receipts amounted to nearly $25,000,000, due mainly from the ports of Bombay and Karachi. Thanks to good Indian harvests, the exports of wheat and oleaginous grains of all sorts were so heavy as to require a large supplementary tonnage in the middle of the year, creating a remarkable movement of the vessels in ballast from the Mediterranean. This category of shipping reached the record figure of 671,000 tons.

GERMANS RUSH TO PATRONIZE AIRSHIP LINE

DUSSELDORF, Germany, June 25.—There is such a heavy demand for tickets on the next trip of the aerial liner Deutschland that Count Zeppelin was forced today to send a notice to the newspapers that all places had been engaged.

Walter Meyerheim, one of the enthusiastic passengers on the trip just ended, said today: "I have just returned from the first aerial cruise, to find myself a confirmed airman. The trip was glorious. I was ushered into the saloon car and took my seat near a window. The car, in its fittings and general plan, looks somewhat like a very luxurious tramcar.

"When the command 'let go' was given we felt hardly any motion at all, but saw that we were gliding upward. For just one moment, when we were 100 feet high, I felt a slight sensation of giddiness, but this quickly passed away and I settled down to pure enjoyment such as I have never before experienced. The objects on the earth, the houses, the trees and large buildings became smaller and smaller and the atmosphere became more and more exhilarating.

Felt No Motion.

"Then began a rush through the air at a tremendous rate. Houses, trees and other objects on the earth simply flew by, yet there was no motion perceptible to us in the air. As we moved on I stole an occasional glance at the other passengers. All of them were plainly filled with the same delight and sense of new pleasure that I was. The eight women were calm, and they were enjoying every moment of the strange experience. After a time I got to my feet and walked about in the car, watching the fleeing landscape below. The thing was now becoming real to us. We felt as if we had always traveled in the air. One moment, and then our first delight came back to us.

After a time we became hungry and went to the buffet for breakfast. Several of us opened champagne and drank to the success of the company and to ourselves. They were toasts of filmly air up the air.

Little Difference in Rain.

"When we were ready to neglect our champagne we were passing over Germany's great mining centre and manufacturing district surrounding Dortmund. Next we flew over Dortmund itself and thence homeward.

"When it began to rain, as it did after a time, the windows were closed. We were now running against the wind. There was no motion, but there was some vibration because the motors were running full power.

"During the entire trip none of us felt the least seasickness—or I should say airsickness—and the landing itself was perfect. We came to earth with just the suspicion of a shock."

BESS CLAYTON SEEKS DIVORCE

NEW YORK, June 25.—Another one of the supposedly happily married couples on the stage has separated. Its component parts are Julian Mitchell, stage manager, and Bessie Clayton, dancer.

After sixteen years of married life Mrs. Mitchell has decided that she wants her freedom, and has sued for absolute divorce. Her complaint has been filed in the Court of Chancery in Trenton, N. J. Mitchell admitted that papers had been served on him, but he refused to discuss the case. Mrs. Mitchell asks for the custody of their nine-year-old daughter Priscilla, also for alimony and for permission to resume her maiden name.

VANDERBILT CUTS BILTMORE EXPENSES

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 25.—George W. Vanderbilt, owner of the Biltmore estate of 300,000 acres of land and a costly mansion, has inaugurated a system of economy. The main part of the Biltmore house has been closed, and the bachelor quarters are being fitted up for a family residence. To keep the house in order required more than forty servants, and this number has been reduced to eight women and two men. Mr. Vanderbilt's valet's head has fallen under the axe. Instead of choosing a forester to succeed Dr. C. A. Schenck, who resigned recently, Mr. Vanderbilt has taken personal charge of this department.

12 SAVED BY GIRL IN BLAZE IN LYNN HOUSE

Plucking her pet kitten from the flames after her father had escaped with her eleven-year-old brother Pearl, thirteen-year-old Agnes Yeaton became the heroine in a dangerous tenement house fire in Lynn, shortly after 4 o'clock this morning.

Alone, the little girl, who is the daughter of Erastus Yeaton, went through the smoke-filled corridors of a three-story frame structure. She aroused the occupants on every floor. As a result of her work twelve persons escaped death or serious injury by running to the streets in their night clothes. The two upper stories of the house, which is at No. 24 Blownville avenue, were wrecked. The damage amounts to $3,500.

The building is in the centre of the tenement district. The fire for over an hour was a menace to other crowded dwellings. It was with difficulty that it was finally gotten under control.

Yeaton and his two children occupied the third story of the house. His wife is away visiting in Hudson. When the girl was awakened she shouted an alarm, aroused her brother Pearl, and ran into her father's room, awakening him. The rooms were filled with a thick smoke. The girl then searched out her kitten, and trailed after her father, who fled with the boy.

MISS HELEN F. HURLEY

LYNN MAN FOUND DEAD ON HIS LAWN

LYNN, June 25.—Henry H. Caldwell of No. 17 High Rock terrace was found dead on the lawn in front of his home by Frank N. Ready, his next door neighbor. Mr. Caldwell left for work at his usual time. About half an hour later his body was discovered. He was sixty-six years old. His wife is at present on a visit to York Beach. The medical examiner said that death was due to heart failure.

GIRL'S SONG A CLASS HIT AT ROXBURY

Considerable favorable comment has been heard of the musical abilities of Miss Helen F. Hurley, who contributed the words and music of the graduating class song of the West Roxbury High School.

Miss Hurley is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley of No. 29 Wenham street, Forest Hills. Since she was ten years of age she had devoted her attention to the study of music and has written a number of songs. Her parents intend to send her abroad to study.

The words of the class song are as follows:

Class Song.

We are the class of 1910, who bid thee fond farewell,
West Roxbury, our Alma Mater, school we love so well.
We've tried each year, with right good cheer, our banner to uphold,
As classmates, we have entered; as classmates we will go,
And though we leave thy sheltering fold, dear school, forevermore
We linger yet, averse to part, thy blessing to implore.

CHORUS.

We are the class of 1910; and in comradeship we stand;
We bid farewell for once and all
To the happy days which we recall,
No old acquaintance we'll forget,
That is our motto true—
And now and then we'll meet again
To toast the class of 1910.

The portal doors are open wide, life beckons to us now,
We go to follow Honor's path, that we may win renown,
For every strife and test severe, we'll always be well-armed,
And in the coming struggles, the victors be unharmed,
But though our paths of life may lead us over land and sea,
We'll always be united in our love for West Roxbury.

POLICE GUARD BABY HEIR TO WALSH RICHES

BAR HARBOR, June 25.—Not even a baby crown prince could be more carefully guarded nor could more precautions be taken to safeguard a royal infant than those adopted by the Edward E. McLeans to insure the safety of their infant at the Briars, their Summer home here.

They have spared no effort to prevent anybody trespassing on the place and carrying off the child, as was attempted in Washington some time ago. Two special policemen have been engaged to watch day and night, and the boy is never left with less than two servants.

Newport used to have its "Baby" Brown, reputed to be the wealthiest child in the world, but Bar Harbor can now lay claim to a like distinction in having the $100,000,000 grandson of Thomas F. Walsh.

Mr. Walsh gave his son-in-law and daughter the Briars as a Christmas gift just before his death. It is one of the show places of Mount Desert and formerly belonged to the late J. Montgomery Sears.

POPE IS FIRM IN SUPPORT OF MERRY DEL VAL

ROME, June 24.—The revelation of the fact that Cardinal Merry del Val, Papal Secretary of State, had tendered his resignation to Pope Pius X. and that the pontiff had refused to accept it caused a sensation today.

The Cardinal's action had not been unexpected, but that of the Pope caused great surprise in view of the critical situation now existing in the relations between the Vatican and Germany and Spain. That the Pope will remain firm in his support of the secretary was made evident by the words with which he rejected the resignation. They were:

"I would rather renounce the Papacy than lose the services of Merry del Val."

All this is taken to indicate that the Vatican will be firm in its attitude toward Spain, and that there will be no modification of its stand on the protest against the Spanish Government's religious program, despite the pending Concordant negotiations.

The Vatican appreciates the fact that Premier Canalejas of Spain would give the Papal power an opportunity to recede, but with Merry del Val at the helm it is certain that the utmost firmness will be shown at all stages. No further action will be taken on Germany's protest against the encyclical. The opposition to Del Val in the College of Cardinals is increasing daily, but with the support of the Pope he will undoubtedly be able to hold his own.

GUSSY HOLL

SINGER SEEKS NEPHEW HERE

Gussey Holl, the German music hall singer and impersonator who is to make her American debut at the Shubert Theatre on Monday with "Up and Down Broadway," will begin a search for her nephew, Ernst Hermann, as soon as she arrives in the city.

Young Hermann, who is the son of Miss Holl's sister, ran away from his home in Noremberg, Germany, three years ago. The actress believed that her nephew was working in New York in some banking house, but her search resulted in apparently reliable information that he left Wall Street a year ago with the intention of moving to Boston. Miss Holl hopes to find him here.

Hermann is described as being about twenty years old, five feet and four inches in height, blonde and with light gray eyes.

Miss Holl declares that she and Ernst were always the best of friends, and says that one of the main reasons why she decided to accept an American engagement was that she believed she would be able to find her lost nephew. She will be especially grateful for any information concerning him.

TRY THIS YOURSELF

A Most Interesting and Surprising Test

Take the best soap you can find, and wash your hair and scalp with it so thoroughly that you think they are perfectly clean. Rinse the head well and wash out all the lather. Then give yourself another shampoo immediately with Birt's Head Wash. You will be astonished to see how much more dust and dirt will be found. The water will be so discolored that you can hardly believe your own eyes. Another test is to have your barber give you a shampoo, and when you get home, use Birt's Head Wash yourself. You will find that the barber got out only a part of the dirt. This is because ordinary soaps and shampoos remove only the dirt that is ON the hair and scalp, while Birt's Head Wash goes IN and removes the dirt that clogs up the pores. A barber's shampoo leaves the hair dry and brittle, and the scalp tight and uncomfortable. Birt's Head Wash leaves the hair moist and glossy, while the scalp is supple and delightfully agreeable. You will never know the pleasure of possessing a perfectly clean scalp and soft, glossy hair until you use Birt's Head Wash. Tubes 25c., jars 50c.

It is said on what is regarded as the best authority that the policy of the Morgan party in the Street in relation to the stock market is one of slow improvement in prices and a discouragement of tactics inclined to make for hurried advances in any shape. Grain experts, having promised to save the Spring wheat crop if they could only get rain, were apparently disappointed when it rained in the Northwest, for they amended their report by saying it had not rained enough. It will be remembered that these same experts killed the Winter wheat crop about a month ago and put the price up ten cents a bushel. They were foiled by heavy rains, and the Winter wheat crop is yielding a satisfactory harvest. Spring wheat has advanced almost enough in price to be brought to life again.

The pool in Reading is liquidating, but the stock does not stay put, and it will have to be held around the present level for some time before it will be worked off. The Steel pool has been a disappointment, and there is no profit showing yet on its operation. This is a disappointment to its members, because the eminent purchasing agent of the pool should know better than to make mistakes. Perhaps he has not made any. This condition makes us think that irrespective of general conditions there may be a sharp rally in coppers at any time."

STOCKS ACTIVE AT THE CLOSE

STATE STREET—Trading was so light and orders so few on the Boston Exchange that there was practically no business during the first fifteen minutes. The tone at the opening was irregular, but little could be judged by the amount of business, as Amalgamated was the only issue to record a fifty-share lot up to 10:15.

About 11:30 some activity was shown and the market took on a firm tone with a good volume of odd share-buying in the issues which are taken as investments.

Trading was well distributed and the market had a sold out appearance for there seemed to be no disposition on the part of the professionals to sell on the advance.

RENO MEETS JOHNSON AT DEPOT ON ARRIVAL; GIVES HIM GLAD HAND

By C. E. VAN LOAN.

RENO, June 25.—John Arthur Johnson, traveling with a following which would put to shame the suite of the Ahkoond of Swat, arrived in Reno all gold teeth and affability. His train was more than two hours late, but that did not prevent a large crowd from following him from the train to the hotel.

Jack was in a hurry. He did not waste much time in Reno. As soon as he had a short chat with Tex Rickard he hopped into an automobile. Oh sorry the day, it was a horrid car and soon the dust clouds on the road to Rick's resort marked the trail of the champion.

Jack seemed a great deal more interested in the condition of the roads hereabouts than he did in the fact that but nine days remain before he defends his title from the man who laid it down several years ago. If Rickard had not interferred, Johnson would have driven his big racing car from San Francisco to Reno, taking a chance on the mountain roads, over the Sierras.

"What do you want to do to this fellow?" asked Rickard. "Spill him over a canyon somewhere? Nothing doing on the auto trip."

As much as it pained him, Johnson arrived in one of Mr. Pullman's varnished cars. He is under a strong verbal contract with Rickard not to do any more fast driving until after the big show.

Muldoon Watches Jeff.

While those who remained down town were waiting for Johnson's arrival, Jeff in his first morning's work created a tremendous impression in his speed and seemingly tireless energy.

The most interested spectator at the Jeffries camp was William Muldoon, as famous as a conditioner of men as he was a wrestler. Muldoon was on hand when Jeffries went through his platform work and he was watching the big pugilist critically. Later Muldoon gave his opinion of Jeff, and it of necessity, carries weight.

Besides being an authority, Muldoon is exceedingly conservative in his expressions and has never been known to become enthusiastic over such subjects without adequate cause for it.

"Jeffries was a surprise to me," said Billy. "I saw him stripped and I saw him working, and I had good opportunities for sizing him up. He hasn't that heavy muscled appearance that he bore years ago, but he has acquired a muscular development that is of more service to a fighter. His extensor muscles are in grand shape, and those are the ones that tell in the sending of punches.

"His condition is excellent. Before I left the east I thought that Jeffries's best chances would be in forcing the fight with the object of making a short battle.

Jeff Fit Says Critic.

"After the work I saw to-day it seems to me that Jeff is in shape for a long fight if such a thing is called for. Now, of course, a man's appearance and his work in quarters do not tell the whole story. An athlete's powers of recuperation become impaired as the years go by. There is no man living who can recuperate as quickly as he could have done ten years earlier.

"One of the questions that must remain unanswered until the fight is over is the recuperative powers of Jeffries and Johnson. Say, for instance, there is one fierce round in which both men are extended to their full capacity. It will be interesting to watch what the one minute's rest which follows the round will do for them."

Muldoon expressed himself as amazed by the appearance of the big fellow.

"I have never seen him look better in my life," said he. This coming from Billy Muldoon should carry some weight with the men who have not been able to bring themselves to believe that Jeff is ready to fight.

Jeff Like Schoolboy.

The change in altitude seemed a tonic to the "hope of the white race." Not only was he lightning fast in his training stunts, but he went at his work as though he liked it, playing all sorts of tricks upon his attendants and laughing like an overgrown boy. The only thing which he did not do was to throw Dick Adams into the swimming pool at the springs. That was a daily stunt at Harbin Springs in the old days and Dick was so well trained that he appeared in anything but the highest of attire.

Tex Rickard opened up in the moving pictures this morning. "The main trouble," said the promoter, "has always been that it is almost impossible for a man to sit at home and manage the picture show on the road. Jeffries feels the same way that I do about it, that it is best to take a lump sum in the hand and let the people who make a specialty of staging moving pictures look after the films.

"Take the case of Goldfield. That was as well advertised as a fight could be and yet we lost money on the pictures. I presume that it was because we did not understand how to handle them. The way it goes now some one else takes all the gamble and all the responsibility whether the fight goes one round or forty rounds."

Rickard also had a few words to say on the referee's question. "There is not a chance that any one else will referee the fight," said he. "I went into the thing as a sort of compromise candidate and now that I am in it everybody is satisfied and I am going to stick.

MYSTIC NUMBERS HAUNT JOHNSON ON HIS TRIP TO RENO

RENO, Nev., June 25.—If Jack Johnson were superstitious he might regard with apprehension certain peculiar facts connected with his trip from San Francisco to Reno.

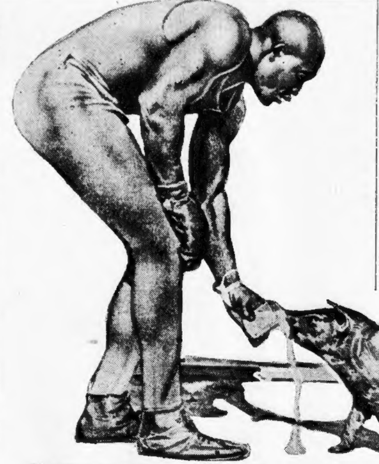
When Jack left San Francisco it was an undertaker who said the final words to the champion to speed him on his way. Twenty-three was the date of his departure. In the snow sheds near Truckee, Jack's train was delayed by a freight car derailment in tunnel No. 13, and the champion and his party finally left the train at Reno just thirteen minutes past 1 o'clock, three hours after the time scheduled for his arrival.

To round out this "hoodoo" combination, he settled down in his training quarters on a Friday.

Johnson did not follow out his plan to begin training operations this afternoon, and in view of the sinister combination that was discussed on all sides no one blamed him.

At Jeffries's camp Bob Armstrong said that the "jinx" hanging over the champion was complete and that if he moved around too freely he would be sure to step on the demolished and collapsible chicken coop.

Jack Johnson Fattening Po'k Chops for Later Use



This photograph was taken at the colored man's quarters. Johnson had the porker for a mascot and thought it great fun to feed him as shown here. As the supply of chicken began to give out, things looked bad for the shoat, but he was still alive when the big move was made to Reno.

GOVERNOR WILL NOT INTERFERE

RENO, Nev., June 25.—In view of continued talk of possible interference by State officers, Promoter Rickard was much reassured by the receipt from Ely of the following telegram from Governor Dickerson:

"Prize fighting licensed under laws of this State. My duties are to enforce laws, not to make them. There will be no interference with the Governor's office if requirements of the law are complied with. This decision is irrevocable. You may use this telegram as you see fit.

"D. S. DICKERSON,
"Governor of Nevada."

ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF NEVADA STATES BATTLE IS LEGAL

CARSON CITY, Nev., June 25.—Protests against the Jeffries and Johnson fight, both by mail and telegraph, continue to flood the office of Governor Dickerson, but they are promptly relegated to the waste basket. The Governor does not intend to interfere with the fight in any way. This was the positive statement of his secretary to-day.

"This matter is final, as far as this office is concerned," said Deputy Attorney-General Fowler to-day. "The law is clear on the statute books. It provides that such fights as the Jeffries and Johnson contest can be held under the protection of the law, and such protection will be guaranteed the fighters and promoters."

Rather ragged at the edges, but still game, the Doves arrived back to the home roost to-day from Philadelphia, where the Phillies toyed with them by knocking five wins out of six games.

There was one small consolation for the Doves. They took the last contest even with the Quakers trying their hardest to make the series a clean sweep, and to-day they were in a bit better frame of mind to go up against those Trolley Dodgers from Brooklyn under the leadership of "Bad Bill" Dahlen at the South End Grounds.

The Brooklyn team has been giving some surprises of late, one reason being the addition of some new talent. Jack Dalton, who leads off in the batting list, is the latest acquisition. He made five hits, one every time up, the other day, and it has been the talk of the circuit. Probably Buster Brown will open the series for the Doves, and Lefty Rucker is slated to face him.

It will be quite another class the Red Sox face to-day when they are let loose at the Athletics over in the Sleepyburg. It may be a 'joke' town in some ways, but there's nothing of the kind about that nine Connie Mack waves the sceptre over. But the Red Sox know what they are up against and also remember some slams received earlier in the season, so they have got their cue how to act as soon as they get on the surface.

BEFORE AND AFETR THE BASEBALL GAME

Six straight over such a team as the Senators is going some and considering every win was pulled out by hammering all the way from the first gun, it is all the more credit for the winners. The Statesmen went down hard in that final engagement before giving the last gasp. Poor work in the field lost the game for the visitors and failure to do the proper stickwork when the opportunities presented doused them.

Charlie Hall did his best to give the Senators a run in the eighth as he passed a couple and hit one man, but he got out of one of the tightest holes a pitcher could put himself in. Dolly Gray on his second appearance in the series twirled a heady game, not issuing a pass and was best when he got tied up on a batter. His one misplay, a throw to first on Hooper's bunt hit, paved the way for the run that won the game in the third inning. After that the Red Sox never had a chance as there were only three men left on base in the next five innings.

One piece of bad luck to the team was the accident to Joe Wood in practice, when he had his ankle cracked, which will put him out of the game for several days and he did not go with the team to Philadelphia. Speaker, too, is still unable to get into harness and there are two good cards out of the deck.

President Taylor was busy denying that Pitcher Cicotte was to go to Detroit because the Tigers had refused to waive on him. "He will be with the club and I don't intend to let him go," said the owner.

Patsy Donovan is good to his friends in the New England league, as he loaned Pitcher McHale to Brockton and Hearne to Lawrence.

DORCHESTER HORSES IN TRIM

SPRINGFIELD, June 25.—With plenty of time to get over their journey in the cars, the score of steppers sent here by the Dorchester Driving Club to race with the horses of the Hampden Driving Club on the Imperial Park track this afternoon, showed up in excellent form in the tryouts on the half-mile oval this forenoon. Stabled in a big tent at the park since their arrival Thursday afternoon, all the speedy ones sent on by the Boston men were in fine fettle, and with their drivers became thoroughly acquainted with the track before the afternoon was over. For this reason the Springfield horses will have nothing on the visitors, and the race will be to the swiftest entirely.

Springfield horsemen predict that they will put it over the Boston men in all the events, but those from the Hub who were at the park this forenoon expressed themselves just as confidently that the outcome will show the majority in their favor. They are looking to Carl C., Cascade, Rosemont, Gladys M., Ione, Klondyke and Kremella to show their heels to their rivals. S. Walter Wales of the Dorchester Club will be the starter.

Instead of deciding the contest by the races the honors will be decided by the total number of points. For instance, first place will bring four points, second place two, and third place one. If at the end of two heats the second and third horses are tied, the tie will be raced off.

MORAN AND COLLINS RACE HERE TONIGHT

Jimmy Moran and Elmer Collins meet to-night in a fifteen-mile race at the Revere track and an exciting contest is anticipated.

Owing to the rain at Providence last night the meeting in that city was postponed until to-night. As a result one half of the sprint field will race at Providence and the other half will come here for the races at Revere. The change, however, does not affect the Moran-Collins race.

In addition to the professionals the circuit party includes McCarthy of Toronto, Wright and Scheller of San Francisco, Coburn, Ryan and Jokus of Newark, Hollister of Springfield and Carman of New York, all of whom will ride in the amateur races.

CORNELL AND COLUMBIA CREWS CLOSELY MATCHED; SYRACUSE IS DANGEROUS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 25.—A cool breeze rippling the surface of the Hudson and bright sunshine gave the last touch needed to-day for perfect prospects for the great intercollegiate rowing contest between Cornell, Syracuse, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Though Cornell was the favorite in all three events, varsity four and eight and freshman eight in the wagers made to-day, Columbia was picked as a hard contender, with Syracuse the dark horse. Wisconsin and Pennsylvania were regarded as almost unknown quantities, but the experts here said they would be surprised if either finished within the first three.

Although the first race was scheduled for half past four o'clock and the main event, the great eight-oared varsity race, two hours later, the early arrival of the crowds gave promise of a record breaking atendance.

The greatest interest in the varsity contest centered around the Cornell and Columbia crews which experts agree were closely matched. In spite of the fact that Cornell was quoted as favorite at odds of 3 to 2 much betting that Columbia will win first honors was done. In fact the most enthusiastic Cornellites admitted that in rough water Cornell would have a hard fight to beat Columbia, as the latter crew had shown itself to be strong under adverse rowing conditions.

It was conceded on all sides that the crews are in the best possible shape.

Much Betting on Races.

Never, as far back as any boat race followers can remember, have contestants worked as hard in training as have the crews entered this year.

While everybody spoke almost solely of the eight-oared varsity race, there is an immense amount of interest manifested in the four-oared and the freshman eight events, and a considerable amount of betting was done on other races.

Hundreds of race followers arrived last night filling up every room in the hotels and boarding houses, but the real advance guard of enthusiasts began coming in early to-day on special trains, in carriages and aboard almost every kind of river craft.

From the Highlands, where the big race starts, down to the famous Poughkeepsie bridge, both banks of the river began filling up early with those who wanted certain points of vantage, and the old rule of first come first served held sway. Everywhere the bright colors of the various colleges could be seen.

Everybody seemed to be carrying a flag, or else wearing something denoting the shrine at which he is worshipping to-day. Every boat and boathouse flaunted a varicolored ensign, while some of the residences along the river bank had been draped in bunting of colors pertaining to the particular college that the occupants hoped would win.

Syracuse Dark Horse.

Of course, the light blue and white of Columbia and the maroon red of Cornell predominated, but there were plenty of the gold and blue flags of the Syracuse contingent, with a fair sprinkling of Pennsylvania's red and blue to offset the others, and every now and then a lurid flash of cardinal to show that Wisconsin was not forgotten.

For several days past there has been an undercurrent of feeling that Syracuse may prove to be the dark horse in this race. This is not because of any especially superior work shown, but because of Syracuse's adoption of the old-time weight-lifting sculling stroke, which absolutely differs in every particular from the long sweep used by all the other crews.

"If they have the endurance they will win," said one expert to-day in discussing the chances of the Syracuse crew.

OFFICIAL SCHEDULE.

Varsity four-oared race—Time of start, 4:30 p. m.; distance, two miles; crews, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania.

Freshman eight-oared race—5:30 p. m.; two miles; Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin.

Varsity eight-oared race—6:30 p. m.; four miles; Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin.

HARVARD VARSITY OUTROWS YALE IN TRIAL ON THAMES

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 25.—Harvard's varsity eight on form seem to be faster than the Yale crew. This verdict is reached as a result of a comparison of the two fast rows of the Harvard and Yale varsity crews last night.

While Coach Wray would not give out to-day the time made by the Crimson crew, it is unofficially stated to have been twenty-one minutes. Newspaper men clocked the Harvard crew at the 2½-mile flag in thirteen minutes, which, with the time credited for the full four miles is remarkably fast for a trial up-stream, as the course is slower up-stream than down.

Men on the railroad bridge at the time when Yale started state that the Elis began the trial fully seventy-five feet above the mark, and, if reliance may be placed in the complete information gathered, Harvard must have covered the course in nearly seven boat lengths better than Yale.

The Harvard crew stood up under the strain splendidly to the very finish, not a weak spot in the boat being evident. Coach Wray flatly refused to give out the time, but by the smile on his face it could be plainly seen that he was pleased.

BILLY MULDOON DECLARES JEFF IS FIT FOR BATTLE

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

RENO, Nev., June 25.—Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson are sleeping in the shadow of the Sierras and all the stumbling blocks which beset the path of Promoter Tex Rickard and Jack Gleason have been brushed aside.

The laws of Nevada admit of championship fights. The Governor of Nevada says that the law can take its course and the people of the biggest city in Nevada seem proud of the fact that they are to furnish a site for the most famous ring event the world has known.

Jack Johnson's arrival was marked with similar pomp and ceremony to that which characterized the landing here of Jim Jeffries. There was the same congestion at the trainside and the same jostling and crowding to get a glimpse of the champion. Johnson with his round black face, his glistening gold teeth and his Panama hat was easily recognized as he came down the steps and had to exert his strength to force a way through the densely packed crowd. With him were Al Kaufman, Sig Hart and all the others who made up the Johnson colony at Ocean Beach.

Crowd Cheers Jack.

Tex Rickard was there and there was an automobile in waiting for Johnson. The big colored man finally reached the machine and stood erect as he entered. He doffed his white hat and bowed with Chesterfieldian grace to the cheering throngs. One glance at Jack's beaming face was sufficient to show that he was intensely pleased with the reception accorded him.

Some one called for a speech, but Johnson shook his head. He compromised by again removing his Panama and posing for a battery of cameras which were directed at him from various elevated positions.

The photographers kept Jack on the grill a little too long. He blinked in the peculiar white light that goes with a Nevada June and the stinging warmth of the sun brought out the beads of moisture on his closely cropped head.

Snapshot men would have kept him there until sun down—your average photographer had no conscience apparently—but finally Jack became impatient and jammed his hat over his eyes, dropped into a seat and the chauffeur with hoarsely tooting horn fought his way inch by inch through a blockade of wagons which were in return rendered unwieldy by the jam of humanity which filled the streets from curb to curb.

It was evidently considered an honor to share Johnson's entry into Reno for his auto was so thickly peopled by uninvited guests that the chauffeur had difficulty in handling the gear. The steps and wheel guards were also occupied by sundry fellows who seemed possessed by a frenzied desire to be as close to the big fighter as possible and the wonder is that the machine did not break down or blow up as it wended its way to the Hotel Golden.

Here again there was a street-wide gathering to greet Mr. Johnson and naturally Reno's colored society was in evidence sufficiently to give the throng a magpie appearance. After a short conference with Tex Rickard at the Hotel Golden Johnson took his seat in the big red auto again and then it was ho for the Ricks road house where Jack is to train.

Plunge Bath in Ditch.

On arrival there Johnson expressed himself as well satisfied with the arrangements made for him—but that is another story. The one thing that is missing is a plunge bath of sufficient dimensions for Johnson to enjoy a good splash and roll, but one who is interested in seeing Johnson comfortably located said to-day that an adjoining irrigation ditch was to be widened and deepened in order to make a swimming tank for the man who is to fight Jeffries.

True to his promise Jeff did a little platform work in the early morning hours to-day. He sparred three rounds with Bob Armstrong and one with Brother Jack, but the work was scarcely as impressive as it might have been, for the reason that there was no matting on the open-air floor, and the boards afforded rather rough footing.

As a matter of fact the exercises consisted mainly of clinching. It will be different to-morrow, for the automobile is coming from San Francisco with Jeffries's sparring canvas for the platform floor and other training accessories have been located. The machine broke down at Carson and the much-desired equipment will be forwarded from there by train.

Jeffries was certainly in a playful mood after his work. He came up behind me and gave me a push with his shoulder and, although he intended the contact should be light, I must say that I felt as if I had been bumped into a cast iron statue with clothes on.

Jeff in High Spirits.

Jim gave further proof of his high spirits by telling how good he felt without being questioned on the point.

"This altitude is not going to hurt me a bit," he said decisively. "When I went up the road yesterday morning I was wondering how I would feel if I had taken a fast run. Well, sir, I made just two sprints and my lungs seemed to open up and work naturally and I have not thought about altitude since.

"They tell me I punched the bag for seventeen minutes consecutively yesterday and that is another good test. So far as I was concerned I did not know how long I had been fighting the bag and I'd have kept right along if they had not called a halt."

Although Jim did not say so it seemed that his good nature was owing to the fact that he has met the altitude and conquered it. A bystander [illegible] to him: "Tell something about the fight."

The big fellow's eyes narrowed and his face hardened a trifle. "I am not talking fight at this stage of the game," he replied, "and in fact I never was one of those men who liked to tell how they are going to knock the other man's block off. It is foolish to talk that way.

Noted Trainer Sees Jeff.

"All you can say with certainty is that you are going to begin fighting and will do the best you can. You never know what's going to happen. A man in my position has his hands full attending to his training and minding his own business, and that is just what I am doing."

"Billy" Muldoon, the world-famous authority on matters pertaining to training and condition, was one of the visitors at Jeffries's camp. Muldoon was on hand when Jeffries went through his platform work and he was watching the big pugilist critically. Later Muldoon gave his opinion of Jeffries and it is of necessity one that carries weight. Besides being an authority Muldoon is exceedingly conservative in his expressions and has never known to become enthusiastic over subjects without adequate cause for it.

"Jeffries was a surprise to me," said Billy. "I saw him stripped. I saw him working and had a good opportunity of sizing him up. His condition is excellent.

Hard to Come Back.

"There is no man living who can recuperate as quickly as he could have done ten years earlier. Johnson, on account of being more in touch with the fighting game during recent years than Jeffries has been, would necessarily be expected to recover in a fuller extent from that round's rest.

"And, of course, if that is the case, several fast rounds without sufficient time to recover from the exhausting efforts may lessen Jeffries' chances. This, however, is something we may talk about and speculate on, but the fight itself would be the only proof."

The business men of Reno, who induced Tex Rickard to bring his pugilistic dollars to this section, are incensed over the sending out of misleading information as to the charges for accommodations that would be made to visitors. Said one of these men:

"It is unfair to this city to say that high prices will be charged. Hundreds of rooms have been listed and the highest price asked for a large room with a double bed and use of bath is $2.50. This is outside of the big hotels, whose charges are higher. I have obtained and scrutinized menu cards from the various restaurants in the city and cannot find that prices have been increased at all."

EARLY CLOSING ANNOUNCEMENT

We shall be open until late this evening and any suit ordered today ($15 to $25) will be delivered before the bell rings for the big fight at Reno.

STRAIGHT TIPS
FOR SPORT FANS

A MAN WHO SAYS HE IS A FRIEND of mine puts this question up to me: "Will there be a sane and safe Fourth in Reno if Jeff wins?" I don't know whether or not he is trying to kid me, but I'll come across with the answer just the same. If the Big Smoke gets put away, take it from me, Reno will have one great time. If the gent who handed me that question has a friend in Reno who sells pistols, giant firecrackers or any other such stuff, he would do well to tell said friend to stock up. There's certainly going to be some class to the Fourth of July celebration in that Nevada town, believe me.

I CAN'T FOR THE VERY LIFE OF ME understand why the Big Noise has not had something to say on the Big Fight. I don't blame him for keeping mum on politics, but why he should be silent on such a strenuous topic as the coming world battle, gets my goat. From what I know of Theodore, I'll wager all the gilt stuff I have, or can scrape together, that he has a very pronounced opinion as to who is going to be the victor.

Straight Tips—Kindly favor me with the information pertaining to the following argument: A claims Johnson got decision on Burns; B claims knockout in their fight in Australia; which is right? GEORGE BOILARD.
Lynn, Mass.

Johnson won by a knockout.

JACK TWIN FOLLOWS HIS BROTHER Mike to the bat with a few words on his bout with Papke at the Armory Club. List to the epistle, and be sure and get hep to the title Jack claims:

Straight Tips: I wish you would state in your column that I am very much disappointed at the decision given against me in my bout with Papke, as I think the worst I should have got was a draw. Papke repeatedly fouled me by hitting and pushing me all around the ring and by back-heeling me with his glove, all of which the referee paid no attention to. There was also a lot of talk about my weighing more than Papke. He weighed 161½ and I 161.

I am anxious to get a return match with him and feel confident that I can reverse the decision. If he doesn't care to take me on again I am ready to meet the "Champion" Ketchel.
Yours truly,
JACK TWIN SULLIVAN,
"Champion bald-headed middleweight of the world."

Straight Tips—Kindly tell me who won the decision between Frank Klaus and Stanley Ketchel, and were there any knockdowns in the contest? CONSTANT READER.
Newport, R. I.

It was a no-decision bout in Pittsburg. Klaus was credited with a knockdown.

Straight Tips: Kindly tell me, through your valuable Tips in the Boston American, how much salary, per season, an average shortstop in the amjor leagues would receive?
JACK B. WEINTRAUB.
Pawtucket, R. I.

Didn't you know that ball players' salaries are a dark secret. They ain't giving out the amount of kale they draw down each year unless it is a Honus Wagner, who probably connects with the biggest stipend of any of them and he is willing to let it help advertise him.

Straight Tips: Will you please decide the following bet in your columns? A bets that Johnson and Fitzsimmons fought and Johnson knocked him out. B bets he didn't. Who wins? LOWELL SPORT.
Lowell.

You've got a nerve to call yourself a sport. Why don't you read the papers once in a while. We have answered that question about a dozen times already, but for the sake of your ancestors will give it once more. Johnson knocked Fitzsimmons out in two rounds.

Straight Tips: Will you kindly state in your column how many laps there are to the mile on the Revere cycle track? M. GANTLEY.
South Boston.

The Revere track is supposed to be eight laps to the mile. The way some of those tired riders go around the oval would give the impression that it was a million times around for a mile.

Straight Tips: Did Fall River and Haverhill commence a second game last Saturday? Please give the number of innings and runs made and by which team. MARTIN JOYCE.
Lowell.

Both teams played their first games, but rain stopped the second contests of the doubleheaders.

CHATTY DIRECT IN 2:151-4

There was something in the way of a week-end speedfest at the Readville track and, incidentally, the followers of the three-year-olds at the track, who had it all doped out which were the best in training, had to make a new book.

Trainer Tallman, who has been at Readville but a short time, gave the railbirds something to talk about when he stepped the three-year-old filly, Chatty Direct, a mile in 2:15¼. It was the filly's second workout since she was shipped to Readville from Brockton. She had been a mile in 2:23 over the latter track.

Chatty stepped the last three-quarters of the mile at a 2.12 gait. She is a perfect trotting machine, and the mile looked easy for her. Her speed is no great surprise, for last season she showed a mile in 2:10¾. She is owned by C. H. Tappan, Attleboro, and a member of the strong stable that Trainer Tallman has at the track.

Tallman also drove the black mare Martha G., who was so prominent on the Charles River Speedway while owned by Fred C. Carmon, a nice mile in 2:18. Martha is taking her work finely and bids fair to make as good a record in a professional way as she did at the matinees of the Metropolitan Driving Club.

Bf Proctor concludd that it would not do to have the other three-year-old trotters get too much of a lead on his stable, so he worked W. C. Brown's good-looking big colt, Bergen, by Bingara, a mile in 2:17½, and then stepped the California colt, Bon Vivant, by Bon Voyage, 2:12½, one in 2:18¼. Proctor also stepped his M. & M. candidate, Albia, by Bingen, 2:06¼, a mile in 2:17¼.

J. Y. Gatcomb's colt, Gay Audubon, was not given any fast miles at his last workout, but went the last quarter of a mile in 2:25 in 30¾ seconds, the final eight being better than a two-minute gait.

WINNER WILL TIE FOR LEAGUE LEAD

This afternoon Malden High and Everett High play off their scheduled baseball game in the Suburban League series, and either one of these teams on winning will tie up with Medford High for the league championship. Medford High lost to Melrose High on Thursday and fell into a position where either Malden or Everett will be able to tie.

The Disillusionment of the Honeymoon

The Seventeenth Day

"Was it to be a constant striving on her part to keep him in good humor—to keep him from being irritated and annoyed?"

"THESE are for you." He threw several letters into her lap. "And here's one for Mr. and Mrs. Curtis—more meaningless congratulations, I suppose!"

"Meaningless? Why, dear!"

"Well, they don't mean anything, do they? They're merely a matter of form. The people who send them don't care a hang about our marriage. They write their congratulations merely from a sense of duty—and it's usually a pretty irksome duty. And you answer them in the same spirit."

He threw his cigar away with a certain vehemence.

"As a matter of fact, I think all this hullaballoo about weddings is a mistake. If I had it to do over again we'd be married by a justice of the peace and go to housekeeping at once, without all this fuss."

"Oh, dear; don't say that!"

"Well, I do say it—and what's more, I mean it! A lot of energy, time and money is spent on a big church wedding and on formal functions before and after—and to what end? To gratify the curiosity of a mob of people who don't care a whoop in Hades about you!"

"No, no, Warren; it wasn't for the people—it was for ourselves. We wanted the whole world to know how happy we were."

Weddings and Happiness

"And couldn't we have been just as happy without the whole world knowing it? Was our happiness dependent on other people's knowledge of it?"

"No, of course not; but——" She turned to him suddenly. "What makes you say this now? You didn't before. We talked and planned for our wedding for months—and you said nothing like this."

"Oh, well, you had your heart set upon it. I didn't want to distress you."

"But you don't mind distressing me now." It was the first bitter retort that had escaped her, and she said it almost under her breath.

"What's that?" sharply.

"Nothing."

"What did you say?" more sharply.

She did not answer.

"So you think I don't mind distressing you now? Isn't a man expected to express his opinions a little more freely after marriage than before? If he can't talk plainly to his wife, I'd like to know whom he can talk to! You don't suppose I'll go through life suppressing all my views for fear of hurting some of your foolish sentimentalities, do you?"

She flushed hotly, but she laid her hand on his arm conciliatorily. "Oh, dear, let's not get into an argument."

Has Bitter Comment

"An argument? There's no argument about this. I was making a statement of facts. If you can't stand the truth occasionally, that's your misfortune; it's no cause for an argument. I said I thought all this muss and hubbub about weddings was a mistake, and your seeming aversion to that opinion shall not cause me to cease holding it, nor expressing it when I wish."

She was playing nervously at a broken strand on the arm of the wicker chair. How could she change the subject—steer it on to safer ground? To read any of the letters that lay in her lap might only give new material for the same discussion.

Some magazines were laying on the chair before her. She picked up a copy of a comic weekly. Her intention would be obvious, yet it might succeed.

"Oh, dear, while I think of it, I want to show you this. It's the cleverest thing I've seen."

It was a full page drawing of a drunken youth leering foolishly at an elaborately gowned, smiling wax lady in a shop window. A grinning policeman was in the background. Underneath the picture was the title: "A Harmless Flirtation."

For a moment he gazed at it sullenly, and then smiled reluctantly. "Yes, that's rather good."

"Isn't it! I think the way he's simpering at that wax figure is delicious. It's a wonder some humorist hasn't thought of that before. The figures in those windows are so natural that one wouldn't be surprised if a drunken man did flirt with them."

She was turning hurriedly through another paper. "And there's a very clever story—I think it's in this copy."

Hits Upon a Fatal Joke

But she couldn't find it, and his interest was waning. So she read at random:

"Why do people have silver weddings, pa?"

"Just to show the world what their powers of endurance have been."

There was a dead pause. The color in her face burned deeper. Oh, why hadn't she realized what she was reading? But her confusion seemed to mollify and amuse him more than the cleverest joke would have done.

"You didn't mean to read that—did you?" He laughed.

But there were tears in her eyes now.

"Oh, come, don't take things so seriously. You're entirely too serious, anyway. You'll have to get over that," with a sort of lordly condescension. "Now I'll leave you to read your letters in peace."

Was It To Be Thus Always?

She watched him as he walked the length of the veranda and then down the lawn. Yes, he was strong and big and handsome, and she loved him—but * * * She toyed with the unopened letters in her lap. Was their life to be like this? Was it to be a constant striving on her part to keep him in good humor—to keep him from being irritated and annoyed? Was it to be a complete submerging of her own individuality, lest it grate upon his?

A Bill to Bar Bridge

By DOROTHY DIX

REPRESENTATIVE DEROUEN has introduced a bill in the lower House of the Louisiana Legislature for the "absolute suppression of the playing of bridge whist."

"I am introducing this measure," declared Mr. Derouen, "for the benefit of the children of my State, who rarely have an opportunity to know their bridge-playing mothers. It is also for the benefit of husbands, who hardly have a speaking acquaintance with their bridge-playing wives."

Whether Mr. Derouen has suffered in his own propria persona from the evils of bridge, of which his bill so darkly hints, or whether he was driven to make war on bridge by observing the struggles of other husbands as they sewed on their buttons and minded the children while their wives disported themselves at the card table, is not stated in the dispatches.

Something dreadful, however, must have happened to induce a gallant Louisianian to attempt to take away from woman her chief pleasure and amusement, the solace for her cares, and the fillip that keeps life perpetually worth living.

A woman with the bridge mania forgets all her obligations and duties, and thinks only of the delights of the bridge table.

Terrible State of Affairs

One can only picture a terrible state of affairs in Louisiana in which a woman arises from the breakfast table to pin on her hat and rush off to a "morning bridge," from which she goes to a "luncheon and bridge," and where, after an "evening at bridge," she returns to the bosom of her family too weary to even deliver the curtain lecture without which no husband really feels at home, the while her house is neglected, her children run the street, and hubby himself seeks in vain for a pair of socks without holes in them.

No doubt this sinister impressionistic picture of the bridge-playing Louisiana woman that Mr. Derouen conjures up is grossly exaggerated, and in reality the Louisiana ladies are no more addicted to the bridge craze than are the women of other places. Furthermore, the trouble is not one that can be reached by law, for women have ever flouted the law, and would simply snap their fingers at any ordinance forbidding them to play bridge and call for a fresh deal.

Plenty of Justification

But, as a matter of fact, Mr. Derouen's strictures against bridge playing have plenty of justification. Bridge whist may not have broken up the family, but it has broken up society, and the mania for it has come to such a pass that you have either to learn to play a good game at it or else retire to a hermit's cell.

There is no more conversation, no more interchange of thoughts and opinions, no more matching of wits, and swapping of good stories, no more discriminating enjoyment even of an artistic dinner. When you are invited out you are expected to spend the evening over playing a few silly pieces of pasteboard against other silly pieces of pasteboard. The only conversation consists of the interchange of the shibboleths of the game. There may be present people of international fame, people who have done great things, who have seen strange wonders. You would love to sit at their feet and hang enraptured on their every word, but nobody pays any attention to them. Their world achievements are of no importance, compared to bridge. You are not even allowed to eat your dinner in peace, because every one else is in such a hurry to get to the bridge table.

If You Can't Play

Over the gateway of bridge might also be written, "Abandon friendship all ye who enter here, unless you play a good game." No matter what close ties of affection have bound you to a woman, she drops you when she becomes a bridge fiend, unless you are also a fiend at the game. She may invite you to her house and her parties, but you would have the skin of a rhinoceros not to feel how much de trop you are, and that she and her other friends are wishing you would go home so that they can get at the amusement that they crave as a drunkard does his dram.

There is, too, a darker side to the mania for playing bridge whist that has obsessed women. It seems impossible for them to do it in moderation, and it is not to be denied that they spend the time upon it that they should devote to performing their household duties. One woman that I know has even gone so far as to break up housekeeping and gone to live in a hotel so that she might have nothing to interfere with her bridge and have no difficulty in finding other idle women to play with her.

Women who get the bridge passion soon find that playing for a hand-painted plate as a prize doesn't interject enough ginger into the game, and so they soon began to play for money. The time comes when they inevitably lose, and then, having little money with which to pay debts of honor, women are driven to all sorts of disgraceful means to get it.

Pay Their Losses

They begin by robbing the housekeeping fund, then the pawnshop makes acquaintance with them, little trinkets and household furniture go and sometimes even honor and virtue. The chief of police of a large city told me that he could name a hundred prominent society women who had hopelessly compromised themselves to get money with which to pay their losses at bridge.

The bridge table is also the manufactory at which women make embezzlers out of young men. A foolish boy, working on a small salary, is invited to the houses of fashionable women, where the bridge game runs high. He is flattered to death at being in such smart company. He plays. He loses. He must pay, and the papers tell of another confidential clerk who is crooked in his accounts. There is a life ruined, and somewhere in the country an old woman's heart breaks for her son.

It's a great game, is bridge, but the suppression of it among women wouldn't do any harm, and, as Mr. Derouen says, it would give children a chance to get acquainted with their mothers, and husbands with their wives, and the balance of us with our friends.

THE FORTUNE HUNTER

UNDOUBTEDLY Duncan made the business hum during the first few months; and after that it settled down to a steady forward movement. The store became a social centre, a place for people to meet. In time Tracy was promoted to be assistant and another boy engaged to make deliveries.

But I started to tell why Duncan didn't want to go to Josie Lockwood's party. It happened toward the close of that eventful day that as Duncan was entering the house with a load of boxed goods, he heard voices in the store—young voices, of which one was already too familiar to his ears.

There were two of them—Josie and Angie Tuthill—hunting as usual in couples; and while he waited, not meaning to eavesdrop, he heard very plainly their passage with Betty.

"Did you get the invitation, Betty?" asked Josie, powerfully sweet.

"The invitation?" she questioned.

"Why," said Josie, "I sent you one. To the party, you know—my lawn fete next week."

I give the local pronunciation as it is.

"Did you?"

"I gave it to Tracey for you," persisted the tormentor. "Didn't you get it?"

Betty caught at her breath, inaudibly; only Duncan could see the little spasm of mortification and anger that shook her.

Betty's Mortification

"Oh, perhaps I did," she said shortly. "I—I'll ask Mr. Duncan to wait on you."

She swung quickly out into the hallway, slamming the door behind her and so darkening it that she didn't detect Duncan's shadowed figure. And if she had meant to call him, she must have forgotten it; for an instant later he heard her stumbling up the stairs, and as she disappeared he caught the echo of a smothered sob.

He waited, motionless, too disturbed at the time to enter the store. A few moments later the girl left.

While he was at work the light failed. He stopped for lack of it just as Betty came downstairs.

He lit the lamp, and in the act of turning toward another caught a glimpse of the girl's face, pale and drawn, her eyes a trifle reddened. And with that commonsense departed from him, leaving him wholly a prey to his impulse of pity. "Oh, thunder!" he told himself, thrusting a hand into his pocket. "I might as well be broke as the way I am now." He produced the scanty remains of his "grubstake."

"Miss Graham." * * *

"Yes?" she asked, wondering.

"Could you get a party dress for thirty-four dollars?"

"Thirty-four dollars!" she faltered.

He discovered what small change he had in his pocket; it was like him to be extravagant, even extreme. "And fifty-three cents?" he pursued, with a nervous laugh.

"Heavens!" the girl gasped. "I should think so!"

"Then go ahead!" He offered her the money, but she could only stare, incredulous. "I'll stake you."

"Oh * * * no, Mr. Duncan," she managed to say.

"Oh, yes!" He tried to catch one of the hands that involuntarily had risen toward her face in a gesture of wonder. "Please do," he begged, his tone persuasive, "as a favor to me."

But she evaded him, stepping back. "I couldn't take it; I couldn't really."

"Yes, you can. Just try it once, and see how easy it is," he persisted, pursuing.

"No, I can't." She looked up shyly and shook her head, that smile of her mother's for the moment illuminating her face almost with the radiance of beauty. "But I—I thank you very much—just the same."

"But I want you to go to that party."

"You're awful kind," she said softly, still smiling, "but I don't care to go, now. I"——

"Don't care to! Why, you were insisting on going a little while ago."

"Yes," she admitted simply, "I know I was. But * * * I've been thinking over what you said since then, and I * * * I've made up my mind I'd be out of place there."

"Out of place!" he echoed, thunderstruck.

"Yes. I've concluded I belong here in the store with father." She half-turned away. "And I guess folk is better off if they stay where they belong. * * *"

She went slowly from the room, and he remained staring, stupefied.

"You never can tell about a woman," he concluded, with all the gravity of an original philosopher.

CHAPTER XV.

Manoeuvres of Josie

NAT didn't go to the Lockwood lawn fete. He excused himself on the plea of being unable to leave the store, and at that time it was a reasonable one. Josie cloaked her disappointment.

But the party came off without fail, and that on a wonderful, still, moonlit night, and everybody voted it a splendid success. One of the sensations was Roland Barnett's first open-faced suit.

Roland had ordered it from a clothing house in Chicago, and it arrived just in time. I was loitering in Graham's when Roland came in. Sam served him, and Duncan, happily for him disengaged at the moment, after one look at Roland retired precipitately behind the prescription counter—overcome, I judged from Roland's triumphant smirk, by deepest chagrin. Well, thought I, might he have been; he could never, by whatever wildest endeavor, have approximated Roland's splendor.

The coat was bob-tailed and curiously double-breasted, caught together at the waist with a single button, thus revealing a shining expanse of very stiff shirt bosom, which creaked, for some reason. With this Roland wore a ribbed white silk waistcoat, very brilliant low cut patent leather shoes and white silk socks.

The trousers were strikingly cut, as to each leg, after the physical configuration of the domestic pear, and the effect of the whole was measureably enhanced by an opera hat—one of those tall and striking contraptions that you can shut up by pressing gently but firmly upon the human midriff and looking unconscious, but which is apt to open with a resounding report if you are not careful.

I am glad to be able to report that Roland failed to commit the solecism of wearing a red string tie; his tie was a sober black, firmly knotted at the factory. Roland wore it all with an expression of proud defiance.

After he had departed, stepping high, Sam called me behind the counter to assist in reviving Duncan. We found him leaning upon the counter, his forehead resting upon a mortar, very red in the face and breathing stentoriously; and when Sam addressed him to learn what was the matter, he seemed unable to speak, but choked and beat the air feebly with his hands.

Sam concluded he had swallowed something, and was, I think, right; he was plainly half-strangled, and only recovered after we had beaten his back severely. Then he refused any explanation, beyond saying that he was subject to such seizures.

Duncan Joins the Choir

Duncan was early to rise and early to work, and rarely left the store save at meal hours and closing-up time. In the course of time he was won over to join the choir. Roland Barnette helped with his reedy tenor. Josie Rockwood sang contralto, and Bess Gabriel, what we were informed, was soprano. Tracey Tanner pumped the organ. Angie Tuthill "just sang" with the others, chiefly because she was Josie's nearest friend.

Duncan confided to me, quite seriously, "that the church thing was getting to him," he seemed somewhat surprised, to a degree indignant, as if he suspected religion of having taken advantage of him in some roundabout, underhand way. He wondered audibly what Kellogg would think if he could see him now.

He had settled down to a pretty steady correspondence with Kellogg, chiefly on business matters. Kellogg was investigating Sam's burner, and seemed quite impressed with its possibilities. He had quarrelled with Roland's friend, Burnham, on Duncan's representations, and ordered him out of the offices of J. Bartlett & Company, it seemed.

Later he opened up negotiations with a corporation known as the Modern Gas Company, I believe, a competitor of Consolidated Petroleum, and in due course representatives of both concerns came to Radville, examined the burner, and retired, non-committal. Then Bartlett sent a requisition for a model, and supplied the funds for making it—thus demonstrating his confidence.

Shortly after the formation of the firm of Graham & Duncan, the young man received his first invitation to dinner at the Lockwoods'. He accepted, and the Lockwoods made quite an event of it.

Duncan described the function in a letter to Kellogg as the time of his young life. They dined protractedly. The meal, consisting of baked chicken, mashed potatoes, boiled onions with cream sauce, boiled beets and green corn, followed by rhubarb pie and ice cream.

The atmosphere was stifling with the heat of the day thickened by the steam and odor of cooked food. Duncan was seated consciously beside Josie—a circumstance of which, in fact, everyone else seemed tolerantly aware.

He writhed in impotent agony, confronted alone by the consciousness he had brought this thing upon himself; it was a part of his punishment.

At the conclusion of the meal, which endured throughout two interminable hours, the elder menfolk withdrew to the garden and the lawn, where they strolled about.

Nat was left to Josie, who conducted him to the side porch, out of sight of everybody, and planted himself in the baggy hammock there. She was gay, even brilliant within her limitations, arch, naive, coquettish, shy, petulent, by turns; animated by a sense of conquest. She supplied the major part of the conversation.

Artful Josie's Conquests

It was on this day that she extracted from him his promise to join the choir; he acceded through apathy alone.

"I don't care whether you can sing or not," she confessed, with a look, "but I do want somebody to walk home with me that * * * I like. Roland Barnett's always walked home with me, but I think he's just tiresome."

"Why?" inquired the young man, with some interest.

She averted her head, plucking at the strands of the hammock. "Oh, you know," she said diffidently.

"Oh!" Nat was enlightened. "Then I'm sorry for Roland."

"Why?"

"I can't blame him, you know." He couldn't help this: the time, the place, the girl inspired, indeed incited, one to banality.

"Why?" she persisted.

"Oh, you know." He caught the intonation of her previous words precisely.

She had the grace to blush and hang her head; but he received a thrilling side-long glance.

"Ah * * * aren't you awful to talk that way, Mr. Duncan?"

"Yes," he admitted meekly.

Tomatoes

GREEN TOMATO MINCEMEAT

One peck green tomatoes chopped fine, two pounds raisins, four cupfuls granulated sugar, one and one-half cupfuls vinegar, one teaspoonful of any kind of spices you would like and a pinch of salt. Cook about ten minutes, bottle and seal.

RICE TOMATOES

Take cold boiled rice, add some tomatoes and enough onion to flavor, butter, salt and pepper to suit taste. Bake in oven one-half hour.

TOMATO MACARONI

Break two ounces of macaroni into short lengths, throw into boiling water and boil rapidly twenty minutes; rub the hard boiled yolks of two eggs to a paste, add gradually four or five tablespoonfuls of cream, then rub one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour. Add the eggs and half a cupful of milk, stir over hot water until you have a thick golden sauce. Add half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Chop the macaroni fine and add to the sauce, cut a slice from the stem ends of good, solid tomatoes, scoop out the centres, stand the tomatoes in a baking pan, fill the centres with macaroni, dust with bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes, until the tomatoes are soft but not broken. Serve on slices of toast, either plain or with cream sauce; cheese may be added to the macaroni, which will give it a greater food value.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD

Six ripe tomatoes, one-half pint cream dressing, two cucumbers, lettuce, salt and pepper. Scald the tomatoes so that the skins can be removed easily. Cut a slice from the top of each and with a spoon remove seeds. Peel the cucumbers and cut into dice, season highly and mix with half the dressing. Fill the tomato cups with this and put another spoonful of dressing on top. Sprinkle a little finely chopped parsley over and serve on a bed of lettuce leaves.

RUTH WINSOR BRIDE TO-DAY IN BROOKLINE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

All our more important weddings seem to take place on Saturday, and Wednesday, "the best day of all," which used to be regarded as the only day for matrimonial events, seemingly has gone out of fashion. To-day's all-important event was the wedding in the First Parish Church, Brookline, of Miss Ruth Winsor and Hugh Minturn.

Miss Winsor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Winsor. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Robert W. Minturn (born Shaw) of New York. He is a Harvard '04 man and of this year's class in the Harvard Law School.

Miss Winsor, who is a Vincent Club girl, came out about three years ago. She spent last Winter studying in Paris. Her brothers are Alfred Winsor, Jr., Harvard '02, of the Country and Tennis and Racquet clubs, and Kennard Winsor, who graduated from the University a year later and is also a member of the Tennis and Racquet.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr Lyon. Miss Winsor had chosen all her attendents from the Vincent Club, Miss Adelaide Jackson, a former president, as maid-of-honor, and the Misses Barbara Burr and Louisa Coolidge, the third daughter of J. Templeman Coolidge, Jr., who were presented about the same time as Miss Winsor, as bridesmaids.

Charles E. Perkins was the best man, and the ushers were James Jackson, E. V. R. Thayer, Alfred Winsor, Jr., and Kennard Winsor, the bride's brothers, and Robert Winsor, Jr., a cousin, of Boston, Edward Bowditch, Jr., and Frederick Pruyn of Albany, Gordon Fairchild, E. Gerry Chadwick, Wendell Blagden, George Palen Snow, Theodore Douglas Robinson and Amos Pinchot of New York and Edward Krumbhaar of Philadelphia, all prominent Harvard men, and most of them classmates. A reception followed at the home of the Winsors on Walnut street.

* * *

Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer are among notable fashionables who have registered at the Newport Golf Club.

* * *

Elmer J. Bliss, owner of the schooner yacht Verona, donated one of the prizes for the Bermuda race of the Atlantic Yacht Club. Harold S. Vanderbilt, on his new schooner Vagrant, is in the race, being the first one of the Vanderbilts to take part in a Bermuda contest.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Prince of Beacon street, have taken the E. R. Thomas cottage on the Cliffs for the Summer. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cunningham went down to Newport from their Boston home on Wednesday.

* * *

Miss Rosalind Fish, the fiancee of John Carter of Brookline, and her sister, have left their Washington home and are at their country place at Garrison-on-the-Hudson, where the wedding is to take place in October.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fitzhenry of Malden, announce the coming marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Fitzhenry, to Dr. W. B. Blanchard, to take place on July 1.

Good Things to Eat

Native strawberries have found their way into the market, to the delight of lovers of this delightful ground fruit. The native berries seem all the more delicious, for the Southern berries are grown for their shipping rather than their eating qualities. Native berries are selling for eighteen to forty cents a box. Fine Cape grown Marshals are selling for twenty to twenty-five cents, which is cheaper than these fine berries have been obtainable in former years.

Raspberries are quite plentiful, but the price is up. Very ordinary berries sell for eighteen cents for a small box.

Swordfish came into the market this week for the first time this season. The first came from Newport. Later in the week a few came to T wharf. Swordfish retails for thirty cents a pound at present, but that figure will probably be cut into by the first or second week in July.

New vegetables are coming into the market every day. Escarole, chicory and romaine are being added to the ever present lettuce as a salad plant. New beets, turnips and other garden truck arrive in large quantities on the boats from Norfolk, Baltimore and Savannah.

New potatoes are cheaper. The best coming into the market bring but $2.25 a barrel, against $3.50 a week or ten days since.

The First Passenger Airship Sails

An Important Event in the World's History—and a Rebuke for Those Who Look Down Upon OLD MEN

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

The first passenger airship has made its first flight.

From Friedrichshafen on Lake Constance to Dusseldorf, the great airship, under perfect control, sailed 250 miles, steered by Count Zeppelin, determined, noble man, whose work is crowned by that great achievement.

Regular rates have been issued for the trips of this first passenger airship in the world's history.

It was no second-rate, hasty undertaking. Twenty passengers were carried in a beautiful mahogany cabin, carpeted, thoroughly convenient, with a kitchen, a restaurant, wide windows—all possible comforts.

This first airship, almost five hundred feet in length, has a lifting power of 40,000 pounds. It glides along smoothly between thirty and forty miles an hour—pushed by engines of 300 horsepower.

Readers, this wonderful flight gives you a faint idea of the power and the future glory of the human race.

Before many years shall have passed human beings will be able to go entirely around the earth without touching the earth's surface.

All long journeys will be THROUGH THE AIR. Human beings in the future will travel in flying cars, wide windows on both sides—with glass floor, which will enable them to study all the beauties of the earth as they pass over it, and a glass top, through which they will study the majesty of the planets and stars above them.

Those that have imagination—even feeble—must see in this achievement of our century fresh hope for man's emancipation from material conditions, fresh possibilities, added proof of man's future greatness AND ABSOLUTE CONQUEST OF THE EARTH.

And since this is an age in which the old are pushed to the wall, the gray-haired man finds it difficult to get work, and youth arrogantly proclaims its supremacy, let us bear in mind one important fact:

The man who made that airship, invented it, sacrificed his entire fortune to it, gave up his life to it, who held the tiller as the great car sped through the air, was Count Zeppelin, seventy-two years old.

He went through our War of the Rebellion, a half a century ago, watching brothers murder each other. And now in his old age it is his hand that steers the first passenger airship which means so much for real brotherhood among men and the end of misery and war.

Is It Such a Crime to Encourage an Unfortunate Boy?

Is It Necessary, Is It a Civilized Act, to Punish and Humiliate Mr. Barringer, Who Has Done Good Work for Forty Years?

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mr. Barringer, principal of a great public school in the north part of New York City, is a type of THE GOOD TEACHER.

He has worked for forty years in the public schools. Scores of successful men testify to the value of his teaching. Investigation proves that the boys under him work hard, respect him and like him.

But the New York Board of Education thinks that Mr. Barringer ought to be punished, and has punished him accordingly.

Mr. Barringer's crime was as follows:

A boy in his school had been guilty of theft—an offence about as serious in reality as that of millions of boys that steal a cake or some trifle, and that are talked to and forgiven.

This particular boy, being poor, fell into the hands of justice, and justice put him "on probation." He was to report regularly to the court, and if his school principal did not describe his behavior as "satisfactory" this boy might be sent to a reformatory—that is to say, to prison.

The crime of Mr. Barringer, who has worked forty years as a school teacher, CONSISTED OF HIS GIVING THIS UNFORTUNATE BOY A CERTIFICATE OF "SATISFACTORY" CONDUCT, WHEREAS IT APPEARS THAT THE BOY WAS ONLY ENTITLED TECHNICALLY TO A CERTIFICATE OF "FAIR CONDUCT."

Mr. Barringer used his judgment, based on forty years of school teaching, made up his mind that a little leniency might save the boy from despair and a criminal life, and was lenient accordingly.

And now Mr. Barringer, an old man, acknowledged as a conscientious, useful teacher for almost half a century, is to be "disciplined," moved away from the school where he has done such good work, and sent "to Brooklyn."

As a matter of fact, Mr. Barringer has given individual thought to the boys under him, as he should do, and he exercised reasonable discretion.

HE IS NOT DESERVING OF PUNISHMENT.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE MEAT SUPPLY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I was much interested in an article by Dr. Parkhurst. He apparently looks upon Argentina as the only source that the United States can look to for the necessary supply of meat to prevent a shortage on the local markets. The statement "that cattle-raising countries on the other side of the globe are too remote to be available for our uses" did not sound logical. When we think of the enormous amount of mutton and beef that Europe receives from Australia and New Zealand, passing South America and always providing a good market for it, there seems no reason why the United States could not get a quantity of meat from that part of the world. The cost of transportation from New Zealand to England is less than 2 cents per pound, and the cost from Argentina to the United States would not be much less. New Zealand's meat is recognized amongst the best, and has already found its way on the American market to a limited degree. When we consider that in 1907 New Zealand exported to England 265,562,752 pounds of mutton and 40,455,632 pounds of beef (to say nothing of the 37,525,000 pounds of butter, 22,578,000 pounds of cheese and 170,240,000 pounds of wool, as they do not enter into the question), and this output still developing, it seems that America might benefit by opening up her markets to such a supply as this. Australia also, with her rapidly increasing output of frozen meats, can surely be looked to as a source of supply. She is already the greatest wool producing country in the world, and her trade in frozen beef and mutton is receiving great attention. Meat can be shipped from Australia to London for 9-16 of a penny a pound, and should be brought to America for a little less. Having lived in Australia for nine years and in New Zealand for four years, and believing a trade beneficial to both the United States and the "Islands of the South" could be fostered, I thought I would take this opportunity to express myself, while not overlooking the great importance of Argentina, but with it considering other great meat producing countries.

BIG FINES FOR AUTOISTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Recognizing from reading your editorials day by day that your judgment is always toward the public benefit, pardon me if I intrude upon your time in asking you to give the following lines some consideration:

I have reference to the ownership of the public highways, which now appear to belong solely to owners of automobiles. Speed limit seems to be of no account to them. If they see fit to honk a horn or blow a whistle that seems sufficient to notify the pedestrian to "get out of the way" and many times the person crossing the street is not favored with even that warning.

Noticing an auto going through Columbus avenue at a rate of at least thirty miles an hour, I asked a policeman why he didn't hold him up. He replied: "What's the use; they are usually fined $5, pay and then speed again." Good logic on his part, was it not?

Every day we read of the number of accidents from carelessness or indifference on the part of auto drivers until it has become a daily headline in newspapers and looked upon as something to be expected—not the unusual.

What is the remedy?

An owner of an automobile is presumably a man of wealth. In order to teach him that human life is paramount to his pleasure, why not make a law fining him for overspeeding in the city limits $500, and $200 in the suburbs? That might induce him to sit up and take notice.

There is no question but that the arrogance of automobilists is a recognized fact by the common people.

Very truly yours,

BRADBERT IRVING.

The Shame of the American Congress

LOOK AT THIS PICTURE — THEN AT THIS

(When our tariff laws favored Amcan Ships.)

THEN!

Between 1806 and 1860 NINETY-TWO per cent of our foreign trade carried in American ships; only EIGHT per cent in foreign ships.

(When our tax laws favored foreign ships.)

NOW!

Less than six per cent of our foreign trade now carried under the American Flag; more than NINETY-FOUR per cent in foreign ships.

Rear Admiral Evans Writes to the American:

THAT a merchant marine is a necessary adjunct to an efficient navy in time of war has been recognized by all the leading nations of the world except the United States. We alone think, or at least our Congress seems to think, that other nations are wrong and we right in neglecting this important reserve for our fighting force.

The importance of the merchant marine to the navy is much greater than the country generally realizes. There are, however, encouraging signs that the people who earnestly believe that our merchants should control a fair share of our own carrying trade, under laws that would allow them to do so at a profit, will in time compel their Representatives in Congress to carry out their wishes in this vital matter.

In time of war our naval force must be suddenly expanded to twice or three times its peace complement, and to do this successfully we must have men who are accustomed to a sea life. As we have no naval reserve to draw from, we have in the past drawn from our merchant ships. This would be now impossible, because we have but nine or ten vessels in the foreign trade, and Congress will not pass the laws necessary to increase the number.

In past wars we have needed seamen to handle our ships and fight our guns, in addition to those we had in training. For the next war we shall want not only these, but also another class even more difficult to secure—trained engine-room men—and these we can only get from among those who have successfully driven engines at sea. There is no other source from which to draw. We can get them only from steamships under our own flag. Congress may dodge the issue for some time longer, but the people of the country will, in the end, avoid the positive danger that now threatens us in case of war, by providing the only remedy—a prosperous merchant marine.

The cruise of our battle fleet around the world, depending on foreign bottoms for the coal necessary to drive their engines, was a surprise to our own people, as well as to the world generally. The only ones who failed to appreciate the meaning of it are seated in the Capitol at Washington. A merchant marine would have furnished us the necessary colliers, but Congress had not provided us with one, nor even passed laws under which one could exist.

When war comes it may be possible for us to buy ships, but we can never hope to buy the loyal, nervy men—American men—to run their engines.

The trouble experienced by our Government in obtaining the necessary transports for the army and auxiliaries for the navy when the war with Spain came suddenly upon us is now a part of history. A vast sum of money could have been saved then if we had had a merchant marine from which to draw the ships; and the same condition would face us now in case of war, or even threatened war, for we must not wait until war is actually upon us before preparing to strike.

The only relief for us is in having a merchant marine to draw from. Congress, it may be hoped, will, sooner or later, give us the colliers necessary for the peace-cruising of the fleet, but it cannot be assumed that the Congress will build colliers, store ships and other auxiliaries, to be moored in idleness at the navy yards, waiting for war to be declared! Such vessels must be doing their work in the merchant service, carrying American products to market, and ready when the time shall come to be turned over to the government for its use.

We must profit by the experience of others, even if we have to face that awful word, "subsidy."

R. D. Evans.
